

PM Spells Out Canada's Role In World Peace

By PETER MURRAY and NORMAN CRIBBENS

Prime Minister St. Laurent was headed for Saskatchewan today on his western Canada campaign tour, after spending 24 hours in Victoria over the weekend.

He spoke on Canada's role in world affairs to a overflow crowd at the Royal Theatre Saturday night, went to church and visited patients at Veterans' Hospital Sunday morning; and went salmon fishing in Brentwood Bay in the afternoon.

The fishing expedition, aboard the luxury yacht Fifer, was unsuccessful but the prime minister promised he'd be back to try again.

Mr. St. Laurent received a respectful but not very enthusiastic hearing Saturday night. There was some scattered heckling.

The free world is looking to Canada more and more to take a constructive part in achieving peace and progress, the prime minister told the audience of 1,500.

"It is a challenge that our own self-preservation must make us accept," he said. While it would be "a bit presumptuous" for Canada because of its size to take the lead in world affairs, "at times we can bring good sense and goodwill to bear to help solve problems with which nations are struggling."

The prime minister emphasized the need to keep our defences strong and maintain alliances with like-minded nations.

'Inevitable Retaliation'

He warned the Soviet Union that any armed aggression would be met with "inevitable and immediate retaliation."

At the same time, Mr. St. Laurent spoke of the horror of atomic warfare which could result in "mutual annihilation."

Canada is spending $18,000,000 a year to adapt atomic energy to peaceful purposes, "the only purpose for which that terrible energy should ever be used by anyone in a civilized world."

Stressing the value of "continuity of government" in the field of foreign relations, the prime minister said Canada could be proud of its achievements toward world peace under direction of the present Liberal government.

One of the most persistent interruptions was a woman in a

IF RUSSIA WILL TAKE THEM

B.C. Set to Aid Sons Quit Canada

The provincial government will assist the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect to return to Russia if they choose to go, Premier Bennett said today.

"If they decide of their own free will that they want to go, and if Russia will admit them, then we will give them assistance," the premier said.

He was commenting at a press conference on the weekend disclosure that the radical sect, numbering some 2,500 in the East Kootenay district of B.C., has asked permission from the Soviet Union to return to their homeland.

Mr. Bennett made it clear that the B.C. government will not ask the Doukhobors to go. "But if they choose to go, we will give them assistance."

BLAMED FOR BLAST

Meanwhile the sect, which has been a source of trouble since their arrival at the turn of the century, was blamed today for a dynamite blast that ripped 120 feet from the CPR track near Nelson Sunday night. The track was undamaged, railway officials said.

Saturday, Nick Kanigan, who lives in a Freedomite settlement near Nelson, confirmed that the radical sect has asked permission to return to the Soviet Union. Kanigan said the request was made two weeks ago to Dmitri Chuvahin, Soviet ambassador at Ottawa. He said he knew of no reply having been received.

The Russian Embassy in Ottawa today declined comment. "I'm sorry, but there is nothing we can say about this at the present time," an embassy spokesman told a reporter.

The spokesman indicated that Mr. Chuvahin has received such a letter but declined to say whether the ambassador has replied.

An immigration department official said the department has received word that the Doukhobors are planning to leave Canada. He said not all the Doukhobors would automatically lose their Canadian citizenship by returning to Russia.

If the Soviet Union gives permission, Kanigan will be one of five Freedomite delegates who will go back to investigate conditions in his homeland.

Kanigan said the Freedomites want to go back to Russia because "it's hard living here in Canada. When we came, we were promised freedom of religion. We don't feel we're getting it."

SPLINTER GROUP

Freedomites, a splinter group from the 10,000 Doukhobors who live in B.C., claim that Canadian schools teach militarism. They have refused to send their children to school. But the B.C. government, in a "get tough" policy, detained more than 100 of their children in a special institution at New Denver, 66 miles from Nelson.

Discontented almost since the day they set foot on Canadian soil, the Freedomites have paraded in the nude, burned schools, and blown up railway bridges in protest against what they call persecution by federal and provincial governments.

The Sons of Freedom have a history of attempted moves out of Canada. Most of them have been abortive.

John Lebedoff, secretary of the Freedomites, planned to lead them back to Russia or to Turkey in July, 1949. Nothing came of it.

In 1952, Stefan Sorokin, bearded mystical Freedomite leader, went to Uruguay to look for a new home. He found one, but only for himself. Sorokin still lives in Montevideo.

A consultative committee appointed by the B.C. government in 1950 sent requests to more than a dozen countries asking them if they would take Freedomites. Only Costa Rica replied and the Freedomites said they didn't like Costa Rica.

PRAYER FOR TODAY

O God, bring my life to ever fuller meaning and deeper expression. May I grow in all things, in knowledge, in service, in devotion to Thee. Each day may I get more out of my time, out of my work, out of my Bible. Let me never forget that return is ever in proportion to investment and that those who seek will surely find. Help me to discover the abundant life in Christ. Amen.

SNOW, COLD HURT CROPS IN EUROPE

LONDON (AP)—A freak cold snap gripped Europe today.

There was heavy damage to crops in Britain, France and Italy. Snow lay 10 inches deep in places in Yugoslavia while in the rich Po Valley in Italy, hail destroyed 80 per cent of crops.

PUBLIC POWER FOR COLUMBIA?

Bennett Hints B.C. To Take Ottawa Aid

Premier Upset Because PM Didn't Call

A broad hint that British Columbia is ready to pick up the federal government's offer of financial aid in developing the huge power resources of the Columbia River on some basis or another came from the Social Credit leaders today.

Following Prime Minister St. Laurent's specific outline of the federal offer last week, both Premier Bennett and national Social Credit leader Solon E. Low commented on the project.

While Premier Bennett did not make a direct announcement that the Columbia would be a public power scheme—a contingency of the federal offer—he did say B.C. is prepared to accept either outright grants from Ottawa, or low-interest long-term loans for development of the hydro.

At the same time he declared if the national government negotiates downstream benefits with the U.S. that B.C. does not like, the provincial government will veto them.

Meantime, at another press conference here, Mr. Low side-stepped the public vs. private power issue, but said he endorsed the federal offer of aid on the project and had always thought there should be "a spirit of partnership" between the two governments on such projects.

Waiting for Official Word

Premier Bennett obviously was annoyed because Prime Minister St. Laurent had not approached him during his Saturday-Sunday visit in Victoria. His position always has been that he knows nothing about the federal government's offer to participate financially in the development beyond reports of a press conference held by Fisheries Minister James Sinclair in Vancouver.

"I have been waiting (since the conference) for a letter which I thought would come from the national government," said the premier.

"When that didn't come, I thought that the prime minister planned to call directly at this office while he was in Victoria. But he made no direct approach when he was here."

"So the situation is that I have had no letter, no representations from the prime minister."

"It had been my hope all along that this offer (that reported by Mr. Sinclair) was not just a political manoeuvre. Now I am very disappointed that I have had no letter, no calls from the prime minister."

The premier, by inference, left the idea that if Ottawa wants to co-operate on the Columbia, the prime minister must come to him.

"If the federal government wants to make substantial grants, they will be acceptable. If the federal government wants to give long-term low-interest loans, under the market price, then this assistance and co-operation will be acceptable."

SURMISE

"Do you mean as a joint venture?" the premier was asked. "You have my statement," said the premier. "You can surmise."

The premier said that in the case of low-interest loans, the B.C. government would guarantee their repayment.

Then, he was asked, do his remarks mean that B.C. is prepared for public development of the Columbia; or does it mean that the government would guarantee loans to a private power corporation?

"We do not guarantee the bonds for private companies," he said.

Premier Bennett said B.C. "is disappointed" by the delays in PUBLIC POWER SUPPORTED BY B.C. CHAMBER

VANCOUVER — A resolution asking that the Mica Creek development on the Columbia River be entrusted to the B.C. Power Commission was passed by the B.C. Chamber of Commerce at its weekend meeting here.

It was adopted by a vote of 35-20. Earlier the chamber had favored a free enterprise policy, although it had expressed itself as not opposed to government operations in fields where there is a tendency for monopolies to arise.

Red Police Quell 3rd Polish Riot

WARSAW (AP) — A major riot was reported today from Jaroslav, a garrison town in southwest Poland.

More than 1,000 police and troops were called in to quell the disturbance. No date was given for the affair. It apparently occurred just before the weekend.

A report in the Warsaw news paper Sztandar Mlodych suggested it was one of the most serious of recent outbursts against Communist state authority. It carried indications of a military mutiny.

These indications were: 1. The arrival in the town of Gen. Kuropieska, a district military commander. 2. Appointment of a military investigation commission to determine responsibility for the trouble.

ARRESTED DRUNKEN SOLDIER

The papers said the outburst started with the arrest of a young soldier on a charge of drunkenness. It added that other soldiers and "young hooligans" sided with the arrested man, went to the police station and "started a fuss." A crowd of several hundred gathered outside the police station and flung stones through the windows.

FOR 11 MINUTES

Boy Trapped Under Boat

DEEP COVE, B.C. (CP)—An 11-year-old boy was trapped for 10 minutes Sunday beneath a capsized 19-foot cabin cruiser as rescuers sought to free him.

David Liversidge was a passenger in the boat which flipped over when struck by the wake of a passing ship.

The boy remained calm until an unidentified man arrived in a small boat and dived under to save him.

Ivan Francis, 24, and Miss Jessie Cooper, who had been thrown free from the boat, were rescued from the cold waters of Burrard Inlet, two miles off shore.

First Road Open To Port Renfrew

For the first time in history, cars and trucks are able to drive from Port Renfrew, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, to connect with the Vancouver Island highway system.

In the last week traffic has been able to move over an access road built by B.C. Forest Products Ltd. from its beach camp at Port Renfrew to its Bear Creek Camp, at the end of the public road extending westward from Shawnigan Lake.

This road is private, and is likely to remain so. Good progress, meanwhile, is being made on the West Coast Road between Jordan River and Port Renfrew, and it is expected it will be completed by the end of August, and open to the public.

The BCPC road actually is not completed, according to company officials. It is quite apart from the 16 miles of logging railroad that join Port Renfrew and Bear Creek Camp, but follows roughly the same route up the San Juan River valley.

Teen-Age Problem Desperate

(UP and AP DISPATCHES)

WASHINGTON — Prostitution, venereal disease, drug addiction and drinking are increasing alarmingly among American teenagers, a Senate judiciary subcommittee report showed today.

Chairman Thomas C. Hennings, a Missouri Democrat, called for all levels of government "to do something about this blot on the American scene."

The subcommittee said more than one million juveniles between 10 and 17 will be brought before the courts in 1965 if the present upward trend in delinquency continues. This compares with an estimated 530,000 juvenile court cases this year. The subcommittee issued a special 250-page report on the results of nearly four years of nationwide hearings.

It estimated that at least 200,000 teenagers contract venereal diseases each year.

OTTAWA (CP)—With a week of Maritime campaigning behind him, John Diefenbaker today opens an intensive two-day drive for support along the Quebec side of the Ottawa River.

His main speeches will be at Fort Coulonge, Campbell's Bay and Shawville, in a riding which ROME (UP)—Premier Antonio Segni presented his government's resignation to President Giovanni Gronchi tonight.

Gov't Quits

The decision to quit was taken at a special cabinet session late in the day. The coalition cabinet authorized Segni to end its 22-month-old stay in office following a move by deputy premier Giuseppe Saragat Sunday to pull his Social Democratic party out of the coalition.

COLUMBIA

U.S.-Canada negotiations on the Columbia downstream benefits. "It is true that they meet on May 15," he said, "but they haven't even agreed on an agenda yet. There have been no real steps, and we don't want any more smoke screens from Ottawa."

When the negotiations finally are undertaken, said the premier, "unless they (Ottawa) protect us, we will veto the negotiations. We will insist that B.C. be entitled to its proper share of downstream benefits."

The fact that negotiations have not gone on, despite the federal election, means, said the premier, Ottawa is "playing politics with the people's resources."

Premier Bennett declared that Victoria has made representations to Ottawa suggesting, generally, dominion-provincial resources development.

"Ottawa's co-operation has been very slim to date."

Timing of the federal offer just before the election and the manner in which it was made by Fisheries Minister James Sinclair at a press conference, were also criticized by Mr. Low.

"But we sincerely hope that what the prime minister and his water boy (Mr. Sinclair) have said will be made a fact," the national leader said.

"It is worthy of consideration and if any restrictions that may be tied to the offer can be made acceptable to Mr. Bennett, for the benefit of the province, we would rejoice."

Asked for a general policy statement on public-versus-private power, Mr. Low replied:

"Generally we stand for private enterprise; we think it's best. But there are times and circumstances when public development is wiser."

He didn't know enough about the Columbia to say whether it was the place for public power. "I am sure your provincial leaders have the matter well in hand and will be able to reach the right decision," Mr. Low said.

blue hat who repeatedly asked: "Why did you vote with Russia against England over Suez?"

The prime minister ignored the question but said it was "a tragic moment" for the free world when Britain and America divided over the Suez issue.

Canada believed the fighting would spread if not stopped immediately, and the federal government had suggested steps in the United Nations with the dual aim of stopping hostilities and restoring Commonwealth and Anglo-American solidarity.

SOME BOOING

There was some booing in the theatre when he added: "You have only to read the British and French newspapers to see how much these efforts were appreciated."

Before the theatre rally, Mr. St. Laurent attended a reception in the Empress Hotel given by Alistair Fraser, Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich.

Crowds packed the lower ballroom as the prime minister moved around the room shaking hands with everyone who came in his path.

He arrived 30 minutes late after taking an hour's nap, following the long day's journey from Vancouver to Nanaimo and down Vancouver Island by car.

Mr. St. Laurent arrived at the theatre at 8 p.m. dressed in a dark blue suit and sporting a red rose in his lapel.

The prime minister said he picked Victoria to speak on international affairs because of the city's historic ties with Britain and position on the Pacific Ocean.

He spoke of Canada's stepped-up trade with Japan, but made no mention of the controversial topic of recognition of Red China.

"It is important to this nation to keep good relations and prevent as many eastern countries as we can from coming under the influence of Communism," Mr. St. Laurent said.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY

"We have a magnificent opportunity, a magnificent challenge, to help these Asian peoples to attain their legitimate national aspirations without letting these nationalisms decrease the unity of the free world."

"The importance of Canada's ties with the Commonwealth was stressed by the prime minister."

"This association has a great capacity for good, not only for member nations, but for the entire free world," he said.

Despite its limitations, the UN is the "principal hope for the preservation of peace in our troubled world," Mr. St. Laurent said.

Without it, there would be international anarchy.

Summing up the external policy followed by his government, the prime minister said it has been:

"To work for peace, to work in a friendly fashion, with every other nation that is willing to try with us to root out the causes of war and solve differences between nations by peaceful means."

After Mr. St. Laurent concluded his address, a number of his hearers called for questions.

Forrest L. Shaw, the chairman hesitated and glanced quickly at Mr. St. Laurent, who gave no sign.

Mr. Shaw then invited John D. Johnson, Victoria Social Credit constituency association president, to go up to the stage and ask his question afterwards.

The curtain over the stage started to descend but was quickly checked as a chorus of protests broke out. Mr. Shaw called for the national anthem and a few people hooted and jeered as the orchestra began to play. But everyone stood while the anthem was sung.

LESS TIRED

Mr. St. Laurent looked less tired Sunday than he did after the strenuous itinerary Saturday.

A fleet of small boats circled round and round the yacht, Fifer, in the sunlit bay, and Mr. St. Laurent, standing on deck in grey suit and hat, waved repeatedly as cameramen took his picture.

Mr. St. Laurent, his daughter, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, Defence Minister Ralph Campney and other members of the party sat down to a formal lunch aboard the Fifer before the prime minister went fishing.

Photographers followed him closely hoping the prime minister would land a big one. But his luck was out and only weeds clung to his line when he hauled it in for the last time.

The prime minister and his party flew from Patricia Bay to Vancouver in late afternoon. He boarded a train for Saskatoon in the evening.

PM Shows Why He's 'Uncle Louis' In Baby-Kissing Island Campaign

By PETER MURRAY

Prime Minister St. Laurent showed Saturday why he's called "Uncle Louis."

Everywhere the official motorcade stopped en route down island, at Nanaimo, Ladysmith and Duncan, the PM hunted out the young fry.

While parents beamed, he expertly cuddled babies, patted young boys on the head and enthusiastically kissed the girls.

It was obvious that was the kind of "campaigning" the grandfatherly 75-year-old prime minister likes best.

SIGNS AUTOGRAPHS
At Nanaimo, Mr. St. Laurent signed autographs for half a dozen boys who approached him as he left the city hall.

It was here that Mr. St. Laurent took one-month-old Patrick Canning into his arms and posed willingly for photographers.

The incident established a record of sorts. Reporters accompanying the PM in Western Canada said Patrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Canning, was the youngest baby so honored by the prime minister on the tour to date.

Mr. St. Laurent, who brought up five children of his own, cooed knowledgeably to the child, and was careful to shield its face from the sun.

It was duly noted that Patrick did not respond enthusiastically to the special attention he received.

The party arrived ahead of schedule at Ladysmith and only a handful of people were on hand, outnumbered by the reporters and officials travelling with the prime minister.

At Duncan a crowd of about 200 gathered beside the highway to greet the prime minister, and at least half seemed to be children.

GIRLS KISSED

Two young girls were the recipients of the PM's kisses here. They were Diane Dick, who presented a bouquet of flowers to Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, daughter of Mr. St. Laurent, and Rangit Saroya, who gave a sari to Mrs. O'Donnell on behalf of the city's East Indian population.

The prime minister chatted with a number of the adult East Indians, telling them that Canada had room for people of all races, color and religion. This has been one of Mr. St. Laurent's insistent themes during the campaign.

Mr. St. Laurent also took time to untangle a fishhook caught in a girl's skirt when a number of youngster's crowded about him.

After inspecting an honor guard of sea and army cadets, the prime minister stepped into his blue and white car and was whisked down to Victoria.

He apparently wasn't fazed by the bough ride over the Malahat and made no mention of the dust.

At his night rally at the Royal Theatre, Mr. St. Laurent spoke of the "beautiful scenery" of the Malahat and made no mention of the dust.

He didn't seem to understand why his audience laughed.

Your Wounds Not in Vain St. Laurent Tells Veterans

By NORRAN CRIBBENS

Old warriors at Victoria's Veterans' Hospital had an assurance from Prime Minister St. Laurent Sunday that their war wounds had not been in vain.

"We are doing all we can to prevent another world war such as you had to endure," the prime minister told veterans during a 45-minute tour of the hospital with his daughter, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, Defence Minister Ralph Campney and executives of the B.C. Liberal Association.

The veterans took Mr. St. Laurent and his daughter to their hearts as the prime minister moved from bed to bed extending a personal greeting to each in turn.

"You did your best and we are doing ours — there must never be another world war," Mr. St. Laurent told 74-year-old Frank Neilson of Sidney, who served in the First World War with the 72nd Seaforth Highlanders of Canada and in the South African Boer War with the 60th King's Royal Rifles.

Mr. Neilson smiled wanly as the first minister of the land leaned over the bed and shook his tired hand.

"Good luck to you, sir," Mr. Neilson said.

Mrs. O'Donnell stood just behind her father.

Father and daughter then chatted with Duncan Stuart, Victoria, who fought with the British Imperial Army in the First War and the 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion in the second.

Mr. St. Laurent raised a surprised eyebrow when Mr. Stuart told him he had a total of 26 years' army service to his credit.

"You are obviously a professional soldier," the prime minister said.

"Pretty well," Mr. Stuart answered. "I joined the British Imperials in August, 1914, and I was one of the first to join up when Canada declared war on Germany in September, 1939."

"No man can do more than that," Mr. St. Laurent replied.

The distinguished visitors had a long talk with Lionel Bengough, a veteran of the Second Battalion, Middlesex Regiment, and R. H. Humphrey, who was four years in France with the Third Canadian Ammunition Column.

Tom Merriman, formerly city editor of The Victoria Times, was one of a number of out-of-bed patients who greeted the visitors in a bright convalescent room overlooking the hospital grounds.

Mr. Merriman mentioned his service with the 103rd Battalion in the First World War, and his neighbor, Art Geary, talked of old times in India with the British Imperials.

"You must be tired, sir," Mr. Merriman said, to which Mr. St. Laurent answered: "We all have a job to do and must do it as best we can."

He nodded and smiled and passed on to Dick Irving of Nanaimo (a native of Cumberland, England) and "Tiny" Armstrong, who stands six feet four inches in his socks and was one of the first Victorians to join up in August, 1914.

George Emerson, a veteran of the 16th Battalion Canadian Expeditionary Force, had a bright smile for Mrs. O'Donnell as she leaned over his bed talking in a low sympathetic voice.

George M. Clark, an immigrant from Fifeshire, Scotland, talked of his experiences in the First War with the British Brigade of Guards and of his service with the Royal Canadian Navy in the second.

Mr. St. Laurent nodded silently when Mr. Clark told him he was a victim of phosgene gas in 1915.

"I am lucky to be alive," Mr. Clark said.

The prime minister and his daughter also had a cheery word for Jack Draper from Sheffield who was wounded while fighting with the Royal Field Artillery, and Walter Grimes, who served both the British and Canadian armies in two wars.

"That was a moving experience," said Mr. St. Laurent to his daughter as they left the hospital and drove in a cavalcade of cars to Brentwood for an afternoon's fishing.

Where Do They Stand?

A PART FROM THE BUSINESS of the nation at large, Mr. St. Laurent has posed a clear, hard issue for the people of British Columbia to decide on June 10.

Do they wish the Federal Government to assist in the development of the Columbia River as a publicly-owned, all-Canadian hydro project? Or do they prefer Premier Bennett's policy of inviting American interests to exploit the Columbia and giving away most of the downstream benefits to the United States? That is the issue.

Mr. St. Laurent has solemnly pledged his Government to pay a large part of the cost of harnessing the Columbia provided that its electrical powers are owned by the Canadian people.

It is useless for Mr. Bennett to pretend, as he has pretended so far, that the Federal Government's offer is mere "political talk." Nothing could be more specific or binding than the Prime Minister's commitment.

Naturally, Mr. Bennett is trying to ignore it. For political reasons he wishes to shelve his own policy until the election is safely past. But when he steps out of provincial politics and enters the national campaign he is bound, in common honesty, to tell us whether he will accept the offer of Federal Government money on the Columbia; whether he favors public ownership of these vast resources or not. Something much more definite than today's hints is required.

He has no right to let his ambitions in federal politics stand in the way of his duty to the people of British Columbia who elected him to manage only their provincial affairs and nothing else. He has no right to sacrifice British Columbia's interests to the political interests of Social Credit.

Mr. St. Laurent has asked Mr. Bennett a straight question: The public is entitled to hear Mr. Bennett's answer before it considers his Social Credit candidates.

But what of the candidates themselves? Where do they stand on this issue? Are these candidates in Victoria and the surrounding districts ready to accept federal aid and public ownership on the Columbia or do they propose to reject this opportunity in favor of another and far larger Kaiser dam scheme financed by American capital? Let these candidates tell us where they stand on a question important to all Canada and vital to British Columbia.

For years now Mr. Bennett has been telling us that Ottawa has failed to assist British Columbia's development adequately. When aid on a gigantic scale is offered in a sound Canadian business proposition, is it to be brushed aside for purely political reasons while the Provincial Government is preparing to turn over a tenth of British Columbia to Mr. Axel Wegner-Grenn and his foreign associates?

Fortunately, the Provincial Government does not have final jurisdiction over the future of the Columbia. It alone can decide who shall develop the river, and whether it is to be developed by public authority or a private corporation. But only the Federal Government can control the valuable downstream benefits—the extra power created by our Canadian dams in American turbines south of the border.

As he showed in the Kaiser dam scheme Mr. Bennett is prepared to give away most of these benefits to the United States if it will finance the construction of dams here. In other words, he favors the massive export of electrical power which assuredly will all be needed in British Columbia before many years have passed.

Mr. St. Laurent makes it clear that his Government will never consent to a policy of exporting our most vital resource. He intends to drive a hard bargain with the United States on the downstream benefits, which are now under negotiation between Ottawa and Washington. There will be no give-aways to our neighbors so long as the present Federal Government is in office.

Mr. Bennett cannot squander our assets but he and his Government alone can decide whether these assets are to be developed under public ownership, with huge financial support from the Federal Government. Mr. Bennett is clearly obligated to tell us where his Government stands on this issue before the people vote on his candidates.

New Neighbors

THIS COMMUNITY IS HAPPY to welcome as residents and neighbors Hon. T. C. Davis and Mrs. Davis, who after many years spent abroad in Canada's service have chosen to retire here.

For the past three years Mr. Davis has been Canadian ambassador in Japan, where he succeeded Mr. Mayhew. But prior to that he had served as high commissioner to Australia and as ambassador in Germany and China, and won high praise for his capable handling of our affairs.

As early as 15 years ago Mr. Davis was described by one writer as a man noted in Ottawa for "his friendliness and ability to get things done." The speed with which he had organized the wartime emergency measure of national registration in 1940 helped to win him that reputation.

He entered External Affairs already well known. As attorney-general of Saskatchewan and later a member of that province's court of appeal he had established a career that would satisfy most men.

Now in retirement, Mr. and Mrs. Davis will be welcome additions to our city, where so many of their fellow-Canadians from Saskatchewan have preceded them. We wish them a long and happy residence.

Victoria Says It With Music

VICTORIA OPENS ITS ANNUAL music festival tomorrow. This is the occasion on which the community can judge the progress of its artists toward higher standards in several fields.

It is encouraging to note that entries this year have set a postwar record for numbers and that care has been taken to acquire the best adjudicators available within the festival committee's budget.

It is also gratifying to learn that programs—particularly those for the evening sessions—have been arranged with an eye on their popular appeal.

The purpose of the festival is widely understood. It seeks, through competition and under expert critics, to set goals for excellence in the different vocal, instrumental, speech and folk dancing classes.

That other festivals have achieved this purpose is evident from the number of Victorians who, appearing in public often for the first time in festivals, have gone on to win distinction in their particular fields. This is especially the case for young contestants entered from the schools.

The practice of giving scholarships and prizes to promising performers has been a marked success. Those awards, of course, can be given only as sponsorship is provided for various classes and as the public supports the festival.

The people of Greater Victoria are offered a double attraction in the events scheduled during the rest of this week and the first half of next. They will find enjoyment and entertainment in the contest sessions and, at the same time, will provide assistance to a number of artists making an important contribution to the community's life.

The Landfill System

THE CITY COUNCIL IS ACTING wisely in taking its proposals for a sanitary landfill to residents of the Topaz area affected.

Members of the council, after studying this modern method of garbage disposal, are overwhelmingly in favor of it. The alternative is an expenditure costing ten times as much for replacement and improvement of the present system. This involves towing refuse to sea and dumping it—a practice which has not been satisfactory for some years, despite the use of a crusher and other equipment.

The problem before the council is to convince the people in the general vicinity of the proposed fill that their living conditions will not be lowered. Health authorities and others are not worried.

If the residents can be convinced that they will actually have their district improved—and that seems to be the experience elsewhere—there should be little opposition.

It is to be hoped the council can make its case and that prejudice of local residents will not delay a development of general benefit. One thing is obvious: the site as it now stands demands improvement.

The Big Test for the Big Stick

ONE AMONG THE MANY

By B. A. TOBIN

More Than Just the Words

BY quarter to eight there were only a few rows at the back of the balcony, empty and the people were still pouring in. Fifteen minutes later the last seats were taken, the Royal Theatre was filled to capacity and there were occasional outbursts of handclapping as the large crowd encouraged the curtain to go up. It was a beautiful summery evening outside, one of the best of the year so far. Many of the audience must have torn themselves away from the garden and used considerable will-power to get themselves dressed and into the town as much as an hour before the meeting was scheduled to begin. I wondered, as I sat waiting, just what had brought each individual in to hear Prime Minister St. Laurent.

Tobin

For many, of course, it was because this man is the Prime Minister of Canada. Of all Canadians he is the top man. No tribal chief ever held such power, no king has held it constitutionally, the President of the United States, for all his authority, does not have the freedom of action of a prime minister.

Apart from all other considerations, then, a prime minister is something to see when you have the chance, particularly when you live a long way from the national capital.

And many in the crowd, of course, were there because the speaker was the head of the Liberal Party. This was their chief, with a relationship a little closer than merely that of citizen and prime minister. This was the leader of a group for which they voted, for which they worked, and on whose behalf they argued. By coming to see and hear him they were refreshing their political faith at the fountain head.

Enough Curiosity

And a lot of people were there because this was a nice elderly gentleman of whom they had heard and read a lot, whom they had seen in news reels, and who had roused their interest or curiosity enough to bring them to the meeting.

But covering all these categories, and others not mentioned, there was one consideration that had influenced the crowd. You heard it in the lobby as you entered, you heard it whispered along the rows of waiting people, you heard it in the crowded hallways as the audience left. It was nearly always with respect and an underlying note of gravity: "It's the last time we'll be seeing him."

It was not that this hale and active man does not look capable of another decade or two of life. But at 75 it is not likely that Mr. St. Laurent will lead another election campaign if it occurs the usual four years hence, and it is not likely that he will be visiting Victoria after his retirement.

So this evening had a background feeling of history-in-the-process. Years from now, those who were there will be able to recall that meeting and say, "Yes, I remember seeing him the last time he came out here."

There was a feeling, unexpressed but nonetheless evident, that a wave in the tide of Canadian history was rolling by us and we had crowded to the shore to watch it.

It was interesting to notice what a mixed crowd was present. It was not preponderantly elderly, as most political meetings are these days. There was an interestingly large number of younger married couples of young fellows. The sexes seemed to be about evenly divided. In fact this was a pretty representative cross-section of the population—an encouraging sign of wide interest in the nation's affairs.

Mr. St. Laurent's address was not a great one. It rose to no heights, it revealed no heretofore unknown facts, it will not long survive its day or two of press discussion.

Under Restraint

It was delivered in a simple conversational style. It was humdrum for the most part. Only when he forsook his notes and launched out on an extemporaneous paragraph or two—the Prime Minister is a much better speaker than the man who writes his speeches—only then was there a hint of the oratory and force that have made him one of the most formidable debaters in Parliament today.

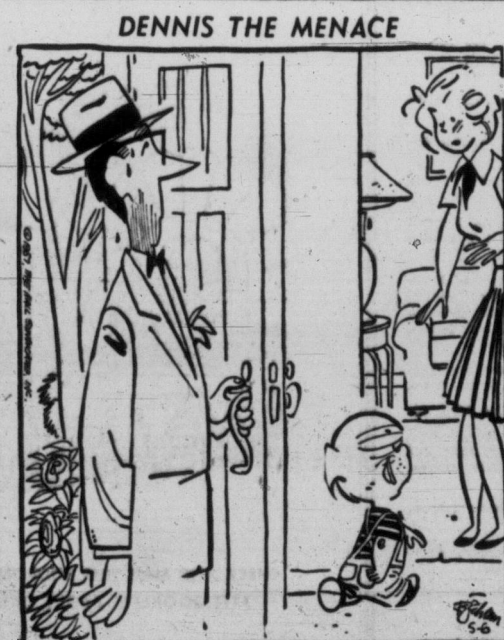

Yet for all the simplicity of the address and its delivery, the listeners did not fail to get an impression of the stature of the man.

In a lesser person the words would have been dull and boring; the audience would have dozed off. But there was an indefinable difference here. Looking around you, you could see that the people sensed there was something more on display than a mere recital of facts.

The silence in that crowd of 1,500 was intense. The words were not stirring, yet men and women were leaning forward in their seats, hanging on the speaker's phrases as though they carried some gripping message.

I think the answer is that in this man the listeners recognized a fair measure of greatness—that inexplicable something that sets a man apart, that puts one at the top over 16 million of his fellows. This was a player from the big league, and the crowd felt it.

One other point seems worthy of note. This man spoke to the people with dignity and courtesy and invited the same from them. He paid them the compliment of assuming that these were qualities with which they were familiar in their own lives. No heckler could survive that.

What About a 'Beaver'?

Shipbuilders of a historic British centre have constructed a new Mayflower and sent it goodwill across the Atlantic to the United States.

On the Atlantic coast of the U.S. other shipbuilders have produced replicas of the three vessels which brought founders to Jamestown.

Reports indicate that copies of the Pinta, the Nina and the Santa Maria will leave Spain for the "new world" this year.

Has anybody suggested that we build a full-size replica of the old Hudson's Bay Company ship Beaver as our centenary project? It would have several points in its favor, historical and otherwise.

And when the celebration was over, it could be kept in service between Victoria and the U.S. mainland. That contact, so largely ignored by more modern ships, should be restored.

No Bells for Cats

Over the radio has just come an appeal to find a poor little lost kitten, "wearing two bells."

I wonder if people realize how dangerous it is to fasten any sort of collar or ribbon around a cat's neck? These animals wander in peculiar places; and may well be caught and held by some protrusion; perishing miserably.

Granted that cats, do, according to their nature, slay and devour birds; much more harm is forever being done by cruel thoughtless boys with sling-shot, air rifle, or some such weapon. Hunters range the hills by special permission of the law of our land, shooting happily at everything they consider their special prey.

Let bells be hung about the neck of human predators! Nature will take of her own. Undisturbed by man she will keep the balance.

The Irresistible Ego

We remember with ease the things that most please and forget what we wish to avoid, what we dislike we lose it is simply a rule to be free, according to Freud. If prone to strange fancies, ties, terrors or trances, or sorrows we cannot express are wrought by obsessions malicious depressions we are blasted with things we suppress.

If we go on a beano or too frequent to Reno, wear a halo or much overdress, these forms of expression are borne of repression the root of all mental distress. When our daily existence is wrought by resistance an escape we have somehow to find, in a nasty psychosis we stick our proboscis and think out of sight out of mind. In physical ills we take tonics and pills but not in the case of nerves, the doctor will question the things we don't mention and looks at "our lines" not "our curves." Now the moral is simple to change wrinkles for dimples, we had better go out on a spree, you can cure mumps or measles with brimstone and treacles but for nerves let your ego go free.

Beware: Boa Constrictor

EVEN in the lotus eating peace of this agreeable city, it is a nervous business trying to add up the results of the superb recent drama in little Jordan. The trouble is, the dangers that still menace young King Hussein keep crowding into the foreground of the mental picture. Worse still, just about the biggest of these dangers takes the nightmare form of a star spangled boa constrictor with the good grey head of John Foster Dulles. From a tangled Congressional thicket, this fearful chimera seems to be advancing on the young King with relentless affection.

Alsop

Or does the bright gleam in the Dulles-boas constrictor's eye also reflect eager anticipation of the glorious things that will soon be said by the professional celebrators of the Secretary of State's diplomatic triumphs? One cannot be absolutely sure; but one cannot repress a twinge of suspicion either.

Speaking very seriously, this darling and fantastic image represents an all too solid reality. One of the biggest dangers that threatens King Hussein, really is the public embrace of the American State Department.

Furthermore, if the embraces are administered in the standard Dulles manner, complete with military aid missions, press conference remarks designed for Congressional consumption and the other familiar extras, then the final result will surely be death by strangulation.

Genuine Neutrality

The whole point about the new position that King Hussein has achieved by his own decisiveness and courage is that the King cannot maintain this position except by adhering to a posture of genuine neutrality.

He has to cope with an inflamed public opinion at home. He has to stand off clever pro-Egyptian nationalist demagogues who want nothing better than the smallest pretext to organize demonstrations against "imperialist interference."

He has just defeated the forces in his own country which would have made Jordan an Egyptian satellite "neutral" for the Soviet Union. He can be anti-Communist, as he outspokenly is. But he cannot be "neutral for" anyone, including the United States.

That means he cannot safely be pressed to receive deputations like the Richards' mission, which he has in fact steeped its mind deeply in the lust for power—absolute power eventually—through chaos.

The two-party system—the one in power with a working majority, and a strong single party opposition is the only way we can preserve the parliamentary system that has in the past and can be made to in the future, administer "justice" for all, because the electorate will have regained its power to restore to the franchise its intrinsic value instead of the empty formula it would become under the fruition of a dictatorship as now threatens.

Practical Plan

At last we seem to have people with vision coming forward with a practical and constructive proposal for the use of Victoria's centennial grant.

If, as we read in the press, Vancouver intends to devote funds for an arts festival for their centennial celebration, what could be more suitable and appropriate than for the capital city of Victoria to build a permanent addition to their Art Gallery to house the valuable and unique paintings of their great artist, Emily Carr, that have been offered by the trustees of the Emily Carr Foundation.

The project for a new fireproof wing to the present gallery is not new but has been under practical consideration for a long time, and is only held up for lack of sufficient funds. The architects' plans, I understand, have been completed and approved, subject to any further addition that may be required, and the machinery for handling such an expansion is there and ready to go, under the direction of an experienced curator and staff, backed by an able board of directors and nearly one thousand members. The Gallery is well situated in expansive grounds, easily accessible to town and good parking facilities.

People of Greater Victoria, let us get behind this proposal and let those who approve say so in no uncertain terms before we are landed with some trivial and tawdry extension of a "May Day" celebration that will be of no permanent benefit to the community or a lasting memorial to the occasion.

Esquimalt Dust Storm

Esquimalt now has space in your paper to congratulate Councillor Carey for his firm stand against Esquimalt Council paying a bill for the rental of a thing they call a street sweeper. I would call it a dust-storm maker. After seeing it in action that's the only name I can think of.

This machine was brought from the States by the firm of which Councillor Argyle is a director. It has been said that Reeve Wurtele gave the word. But it was done without first consulting the council. The council turned the sale down. I congratulate them for their good judgment.

Later this machine was rented by the public works department, again without authority from the council. I do not think the bill should be paid by the council when this machine was not rented by the council.

I think this machine should be sent back to the States or left in Councillor Argyle's lap, where it belongs. The taxpayers' money should not be used for his mistakes.

MARY SOULSBY.

FROM BEIRUT, LEBANON

By JOSEPH ALSOP

Beware: Boa Constrictor

NOW refused to receive. That means he cannot safely be pressed to adhere to the glittering public declarations, like the Eisenhower Doctrine, which are now so favored in Washington.

That means, in short, that he cannot safely be pressed to please the Senators of the Appropriations Committee (and thereby makes the State Department's life easier) by giving regular public imitations of a schoolboy reciting the oath of allegiance.

All this was made rather glaringly apparent while the crisis raged in Amman.

There was one moment when it appeared that the State Department's strange pressure for an invitation for the Richards' mission would result in a really macabre victory for American diplomacy. The same groups that would have led the riots if Richards had come, made a bargain to invite Richards and recognize the Soviet Union at the same time, presenting this decision as neatly balanced.

Sharp Warning

Fortunately, this bargain, which would have made the State ultimately responsible for Jordanian recognition of Moscow, fell through when the Khalidi Cabinet fell. But the episode was a sharp little warning all the same. So was the censorship by the King's supporters of Secretary of State Dulles, pro-Hussein remarks at his last week's press conference.

Unfortunately, the ugly fact remains that King Hussein cannot pay his army without an annual subsidy from somewhere amounting to between thirty and forty million dollars a year. He would never accept money from Britain again.

He cannot get money from Egypt or Syria, although they have promised him money. King Saud of Saudi Arabia, has helped greatly, but not to put too fine a point on it, King Saud is in a hole. That means the money must come from the U.S., but must be granted without the customary rigmarole that aid recipients are required to go through. The ideal solution would be to find some means of passing the cash through the hands of King Saud, which would cement the Hussein-Saud link and incidentally drive Egypt's President Nasser close to madness.

Whatever is done will not be easy for the Eisenhower administration to do without the customary boa constricting. But the guarantee of Jordan against Israel was a first action of real courage and decision. Perhaps it is not too much to hope for a second action of equal quality. (Copyright 1937, N.Y. The Declining Years

"I CAN'T do anything with your father," she said. "The doctors told him he must go slow and take things easily. But I just can't stop him. He doesn't seem to realize that we are, none of us, growing any younger, and that he can't expect to do the garden work he used to do."

"Mother," she said, "can't you put shackles or leg irons on him? Hide the garden tools maybe? Or get him to go out with some of his friends and simply forget the garden?"

"It's no good, dear," she said. "He'd be so cross and worried if I treated him that way. He never has liked being bossed or fussed over."

"I did try making him take more time off from the garden, but he says that if he doesn't do it now, there'll be so much more to do later on."

"I've suggested more perennials and cutting down on annuals. But he's so set on his annuals. And nothing will make him change. In his quiet way, he's very stubborn you know!"

"The doctor said that mowing the grass was absolutely out. So we had the Smith boy in for a while. But your father said he didn't mow the grass the way he wanted him to do it. You know how he's always had his own way of doing it, starting by the cherry tree and working towards the long flower bed? The other day I found him doing it himself. He just sneaked out and did it while I was washing down the shelves in the basement."

"I can't do anything with your mother," he said. "The doctors told her she must go slow and take things easily. But you know your mother. She's always done so much. Independent, you know, and full of spirit."

"Dad," she said, "Can't you get really tough with her? Tell her that she simply mustn't do these things. After all, a lot of the jobs she does in the house aren't necessary."

"That's what I keep telling her," he said. "She's much too fussy. Keeps saying the place isn't really clean when as far as I can see it's spotless."

"Take the other day, for instance. I thought she was safely writing letters, so I went to do some work in the garden. Then I found that she was cleaning out the basement, moving cartons of stuff about, and washing down the shelves where the jam jars are."

"It worried me so that I was quite cross with her. Then she was cross with me. And all because I'd been doing just a little bit of mowing near the cherry tree."

Of course, I may have this wrong because most of it is my imagination working overtime. But I feel sure that in this city of retired folk there are plenty of couples like the one I have described.

It's amusing to a point, and yet it is so sad.

But I can't help liking it, because the worries and the little irritations so often spring from love.

It's what we promised in the long ago when we vowed that we would love and cherish, in sickness and in health, till death did us part.

In a way, it's beautiful.

OTTAWA (CP) — CCF Leader Coldwell, who has been campaigning in Saskatchewan, arrived in the capital by train Sunday.

He plans to remain in Ottawa today and Tuesday for television and radio broadcasts. He speaks at Timmons, Ont., Wednesday.

Mr. Coldwell said he found the situation "very satisfactory" in his Rosetown-Biggar riding and throughout Saskatchewan.

Quiet, Rational Approach
Won Respect for Coldwell

This is the third in a series of articles by the British United Press on the leaders of Canada's chief political parties. The final article, on Social Credit's Solon Low, will appear on Tuesday.

OTTAWA (BUP) — M. J. Coldwell, national leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation party, will conduct the least energetic campaign of the four national political leaders due to a mild heart attack he suffered last February.

The 69-year-old CCF leader will limit his campaign to personal appearances in only six major cities and will speak on about half a dozen national radio and television broadcasts. He also will campaign in his home riding of Rosetown-Biggar, Sask.

TOO CONSERVATIVE
Coldwell came to Canada as an immigrant at the age of 21 because he thought Devonshire, England, was too conservative and hidebound by tradition. He had attended Exeter University College, and there he had picked up the left-wing political thinking of the Fabian Society and the young Labor Party of the United Kingdom.

He wanted to establish a life for himself in a country which would provide the opportunity for exercising his socialist thinking and, on the advice of a newspaper editor, he came to Canada.

Two years after his arrival in Canada in 1910, he went back to England and married Norah Dunsford, the daughter of the editor who had advised him to come to Canada. She died during Coldwell's 1933 general election campaign.

SCHOOL TEACHER
Coldwell taught school in Alberta and Saskatchewan

when he first came to Canada, and entered politics in 1921 with no real expectation of being elected. He ran for the office of alderman in Regina at the request of a group of working-class people who wanted to press for local improvements in their part of the city. Coldwell thought that by running, he might draw attention to their needs. Surprising himself, he ran second in the slate of five aldermen elected.

Since then, Coldwell has moved steadily upwards in politics. He served 10 years on the Regina city council, during which time he became leader of the Farmer-Labor party in Saskatchewan. When that party grew into the CCF, Coldwell ran for the federal parliament, and in his second try, in 1935, was elected. He has been undefeated since.

GOOD SPEAKER
M. J. — as he is generally known in Ottawa, the initials standing for the Christian names Major James — became house leader of the CCF group in 1940, and succeeded to the national leadership of the party two years later when the CCF's founder, J. S. Woodsworth, died.

Coldwell's clarity of thought and forthright manner of speaking have made him one of the best public speakers in the federal parliament. His soft-spoken, rational approach to national business in the Commons has won him respect from his Commons colleagues. He has taken a keen interest in recent years in international affairs. He is a member of the United Nations Society of Canada and of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. He was one of the parliamentary delegates of the United Nations founding conference in San Francisco, and has attended several sessions of the General Assembly.

LONDON LETTER

Funniest Film

LONDON—Things I didn't know until now.

(1) I always thought that the currency of any country was always legal tender within that country. But that doesn't apply to Britain. The popularity of the new British £5 note and the eagerness of people to use it has brought out the information that it is not legal tender for anything valued at less than five pounds.

Only when proffered in payment of something worth five pounds or over are shopkeepers, etc., legally bound to accept it. Reason: they'd get rid of all their small change otherwise.

(2) Those whose job it is to safeguard the citizens of London regard as the most serious type of road accident one in which a gasoline truck is involved. When that happens police, fire brigades, ambulance, etc., throughout London are alerted.

Reason: gasoline from a truck in an accident in Hampstead may get into the city's drains and someone in Chelsea may throw a lighted cigarette into the street drains and WOOMP!

(3) When Bernie Braden was brought onto the BBC's staid Brains Trust program as MC the producer defended this move by announcing: "Most of the British public regard Braden as a comic, married to a panel girl, but both he and Barbara came to this country as primarily—Bernie as a Shakespearean actor."

Reyrburn

TOOK young Mac and Robin to see the new British film comedy Brothers in Law, touted here as "a riot," "brilliantly funny," etc. We sat unmoved through the laborious length of this movie about English barristers but our afternoon was saved by the fact that on the same bill was that 1933 French comedy, Monsieur Hulot's Holiday. Although this film is shown and reshown regularly around London, this was my first view of it.

The three of us emerged from the cinema red-eyed, and with pains in the stomach from laughter. Don't know what sort of a showing M. Hulot has had in Canada but if you notice it on anywhere RUSH to see it. I don't think there's any argument that it is the funniest film ever made, not barring the Chaplin classics.

OLD RESIDENTS of St. John's Wood cling to the days when this was a very select part of London. Yesterday I passed a far from select team on our local High Street called Charlie's Cafe. Noticed a sign-writer at work above the entrance and learned from him that a petition from residents had forced Charlie to change the name of his eating place. New name: Charles' Cafe.

HOW TO give the impression of being a great world traveler without going anywhere: in a Shaftesbury Avenue shop you can buy suitcase labels of the poshest continental and American hotels at 50 cents a dozen.

NEW GAME among the Mayfair set is called Subtitles. Samples: Moby Dick—or See You Later Amputator, Romeo and Juliet—or Someone Up There Likes Me, Henry VIII—or The King and I and I and I and I and I.

FALSE TEETH

Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEREETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plate. Hold false teeth more firmly so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEREETH at any drug counter.

Here's How to Get Better Daffodils

The lovely warmth of the past few days has meant the sudden end to even the longest lasting of the daffodils. Only those in partial shade are still presentable.

To be sure that we have as good or better bloom from the same bulbs next year there are a few things to be done right now. The first is to remove every old blossom head which remains. Nip the stem just behind the seed pod which in most cases has already thickened. The object is to prevent the energy of the bulbs from being expended in the production of seed.

Feeding of the bulbs at this time is an additional way to ensure fine bloom next year.

If your particular soil is light and sandy, it may already be dry to the depth of a couple of inches. Water with the hose nozzle around the base of the plants (not on the leaves) before applying a dry fertilizer. One teaspoon to a large bulb, or a tablespoon to a foot a row will be about right. Water again afterwards, since the fertilizer must be made available in liquid form to the bulb rootlets.

GROW LARGER

This is the period during which the bulbs grow larger, and the actual flowers for next year are formed within the bulbs.

Continue to cultivate lightly around the bulbs, and water once more if the soil shows signs of becoming dry.

Once the leaves commence the yellowing process, no further watering is required. The bulbs may then be dug for summer storage while the drying leaves are still attached to act as guides to them.

Neglect after flowering is the reason why so many good quality bulbs give poor value in their second and subsequent years.

TO ALL LIFE INSURANCE POLICYHOLDERS:

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Retirement Savings Plans Eligible for INCOME TAX DEDUCTIONS

The Income Tax Act (Canada) was recently amended to permit individual taxpayers to deduct from their income, within certain limits, premiums paid for retirement savings plans in 1957 and later years.

The savings portion of either a new or an existing life insurance policy may be qualified as a retirement savings plan. Existing life insurance policies therefore need not be surrendered in order to take advantage of this tax relief.

The possible advantages of the deduction should in each case be considered in relation to the restrictions required by law to be included in a savings plan to make it eligible for the deduction, and in relation to the policyholder's own particular tax circumstances.

Policyholders interested in the new deduction should consult their life insurance underwriters or their companies.

Canadian Markets Show Steady Rise

By RICHARD RAYMOND
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets recorded a moderate but steady advance last week as business news and developments gave investors a more optimistic outlook on prospects for 1957.

The gradual recovery of the markets in recent weeks to the best levels since January — both industrials and golds touched new highs for the year on the Toronto Stock Exchange — reflected a feeling of confidence in the stability of the economy.

Observers said investors were encouraged primarily by news from annual meetings and annual reports.

Industrials and western oils set the pace on the Toronto Stock Exchange, which, after the previous week's moderate decline, resumed its upward trend accelerating as last week progressed.

GOOD GAINS

Refining oils eased steadily during the week, with the exception of British-American Oil, which ended with a good gain. Pipelines, which were hit by profit-taking in early session, also eased somewhat.

Western oils finished with a majority of good gains, but activity during the week was erratic. Higher-priced issues were the best performers as investors lost their fear of stories that the United States would restrict crude oil imports. Canadian Husky and Bailey Selburn made the best gains in the section while Devon Palmer and Cabanga were the winners among lower-priced oils.

Trading in the mines continued to be dull, although activity picked up slightly late Friday. A few low-priced issues traded heavily, some more than 500,000 shares a day. Farwest-Tungsten traded more than 1,000,000 shares Friday.

McIntyre Porcupine, listed as a gold but with wide other interests, was top winner among the golds. It followed the rise of Algoma, which improved eight points, in which it holds a substantial interest, with a two-point rise.

Uraniums were generally slow and eased slightly as did senior base metals. Junior nickels were strong but none were outstanding, and copper trading continued slow.

Index changes at Toronto: industrials up 7.17 to 474.55; golds up .40 to 80.16; base metals off

2.76 to 210.33; western oils up 4.19 to 178.57. Of 859 issues traded, 333 advanced, 339 declined and 167 were unchanged.

Index changes at Montreal: banks off 0.36 to 51.79; utilities up 1.50 to 148.9; industrials up 1.3 to 290.9; combined up 1.3 to 243.5; papers off 10.68 to 129.64; golds up 1.00 to 81.76.

Week's volumes: 323,086 industrials and 2,988,733 mine compared with 323,086 industrials and 2,886,126 mines the previous week. Of 403 issues traded, 142 advanced, 133 declined and 128 were unchanged.

CNR Quarterly Income $5.6 Million

MONTREAL (CP)—Canadian National Railways have announced net operating income of $5,600,000 for March, 1957, compared with $3,278,000 for the corresponding month last year.

Net operating income for the first quarter of 1957 was $5,606,000, compared with $4,233,000 for the corresponding period of 1956.

Corner Pin Keeps Bob From Dream

Victoria, Nanaimo Set Fivepin Marks

Island fivepin champions were crowned in three divisions Sunday night at Esquimalt Bowladrome, but the game that most captured the imagination of the more than 200 watching fans was rolled by a non-winner who stopped all action in the alleys.

Bob McLeod left the watchers limp when he missed a perfect 450 game and a new car offered by Esquimalt Bowladrome for a perfect game, by a single corner pin in the tenth frame after hitting the strike pocket dead centre. He had bowled nine consecutive strikes previously.

The corner pin left him with a 418 total that won him high single of the tournament and a special cash prize donated by the host alleys.

Two other breath-catchers were bowled in the tournament with island records registered by Victoria and Nanaimo teams in team and doubles events.

LONG SESSION

In the doubles, it was a Nanaimo duo that went out to smash an island record as Mrs. Dolly Gregory rolled 238, 230, 199 for 667 and Audy Baldwin bowled 320, 301, 245 for 866 and added a 276 handicap that all added up to 1,533 scratch and 1,809 total score.

The Up-Islanders, along with entrants from Port Alberni arrived in town at noon and bowled for 12 straight hours before they could come up with the winning combination.

The singles champion of the Island, who also took a Times trophy, is Neil Craig of Victoria. He put together games of 288, 188, 230 and added a handicap total of 216 for a 922 three-game total to win.

Trophy presentations are slated for Esquimalt Bowladrome tonight at 7.30 p.m., when all prize-winners will be honored.

Fans and interested parties are invited to attend.

Tech Thwarts Vic High In B.C. Final

Victoria High School's bid for the B.C. high school soccer crown again ended in failure at Vancouver's Callister Park Saturday.

Beaten, 2-0, by Vancouver Tech in last year's final after holding Britannia High to a scoreless draw the previous year, the Victoria champions absorbed an 8-2 drubbing at the hands of Vancouver Tech.

Using nine juniors, the Vics were outclassed by the more experienced Tech squad, which flashed a passing attack that baffled the Victorians.

Both goals for Vic High, which trailed, 6-1, at the half, were scored by centre forward Lance Rutherford.

Briggs Crashes Throne Room In Times Open Golf Wind-Up

Bests Court in Final; Galbraith 'B' Champion

By DOUG PEDEN

That battered old door guarding golf's throne room needs new hinges today.

Joe Briggs, turned back at the threshold in past years, smashed through the royal portals Sunday and climbed onto the Island throne vacated unwillingly by Laurie Kerr.

The quiet tiger of Gorge Vale finally forced the lock and staked claim to his first major tee crown by mauling Colwood's Bill Court, 3 and 2, in the final round of the Daily Times Open Golf Championship at Uplands Golf Club.

Never behind in the match, which produced few spectacular golf shots but kept the big gallery on edge with its crackling tension, Briggs finished like a true champion down the pressure-packed home stretch.

All square after 27 holes, he matched par figures over the remaining seven holes needed to keep the "big one" away from Court, who was also shooting for his first major tournament victory.

For the Colwood pro, it was a disappointing finish to his competitive career. Worn out with his battle against unruly nerves, which prompted his decision to make this his last tournament, Court said he "just didn't have enough shots left."

But Court, who upset medalist and 1955 Island champion Bill McColl on his way to the final, paid full tribute to his conqueror. "Joe's always been a good golfer," he said. "He deserved to win."

Les Fox, managing editor of the Daily Times, presented the Times Trophy and a merchandise scrip to Briggs following the match. Court received a $50 cheque for his runner-up finish. Donor Hugh Francis presented his trophy to slender Jack Galbraith of Victoria Golf Club for his victory in Sunday's "B" division final.

Never Felt Safe Until It Was Over

Galbraith parlayed his accurate chip shots and a hot-putter into a 2 and 1 triumph over Dr. Roger Ross of Gorge Vale in a match that was tied four times before Galbraith moved ahead to stay with a par-four win on the 29th green.

He went two up over his long-driving opponent when he won the short 34th with a par and nailed down the title won last year by George Buckingham by gaining a half with another par at the 35th hole.

Rated one of the city's most consistent swingers, although previously unable to break through golf's upper crust, the happy Briggs said he never felt sure of winning until the Open finale ended on the 34th green.

Tired and maintaining his usual composure, he admitted, "It feels good to finally win a big one. I've been close without winning so often I thought I'd never make it."

Over the route, it was probably his dead-straight shots that turned the tide. Although more erratic than usual, Briggs, who won the "B" division title the first year the Island tourney was held and was runner-up in the "B" final the following year, had his game under complete control during the stretch run.

Declining to alibi for his trouble with the new club he assembled Saturday night after snapping the extra-length shaft of his driver in a practice session, Court wandered on several of his tee shots.

Joe's Gamble Almost Proved Costly

But he was scrapping all the way and might possibly have pulled out a win had he been able to read the slow greens with his usual accuracy. On several downhill putts the Colwood teacher stroked his ball to the high side and missed consistently as the ball failed to curl as he expected.

Although he never managed to hold the lead, Court threatened to move ahead when Briggs lost a rare, but brief battle with his temper on the afternoon round.

Starting the second 18 with a 2-up lead, Briggs went three ahead with a par on the 19th and held the edge as both scrambled for two-over-par sixes on the 20th.

Briggs lashed his tee shot into a trap on the left on the 21st while Court was 200 yards down the middle in three after pushing his first shot out of bounds.

In a surprise gamble, Briggs elected to try for the green and attempted to play a No. 3 wood under the limbs of a huge oak tree instead of chipping safely onto the fairway. The move backfired as his second shot rolled only 90 yards into heavy grass and he finally lost the hole to Court's double-bogey six.

Irked by his error in judgment, Briggs saw his lead wiped out as Court took the next two holes in pairs before Briggs gave himself, as he put it, "a good talking to" and calmed down to get his game back in the groove in time to halve the next four holes and reach the 27th all square.

Repeat Performances Sewed It Up

Turning point of the match may have been on third shots at the 28th, where Court had a troublesome downhill lie on the back slope of a trap to the left and Briggs was on the brink of a bunker to the right.

Briggs topped his chip but the ball rolled to within eight feet of the cup and he got down with par four while Court just failed to come out of the trap and needed two more shots to get down.

Two feet past the green on the 29th, Briggs chipped 14 inches from the flag and went 2 up as the conceded putt gave him a three to Court's four.

The next three holes were halved and Briggs repeated a pair of sparkling morning performances to close out the match at the 34th.

Briggs, who had fired his only birdie of the morning round at the 15th, collected his second bird of the day on the same green, stroking in a seven-foot putt to go three up with three holes to play.

On the first trip, he had fired his tee shot over the 16th green and chipped back to get a half with a par three. Again overshooting the 135-yard hole he made an electrifying chip to within four inches of the cup for a conceded par.

Court, 12 feet to the right, needed the birdie putt to prolong the match. But his chances vanished when his bold try failed to break and rolled past the hole on the high side.

KEN PIERCY REPEATS

Pitchers Bosses In Minor Openers

Pitchers took top billing, over the weekend, as six Babe Ruth, Colt and Little Leagues opened their schedules at city parks.

Vern Pratt struck out 11 and doubled in the 10th inning to score the winning run as Outdoor Supermarket won, 3-2, over Brotherhood of Painters in the Saanich Babe Ruth opener, at Reynolds Road Park, Sunday.

It was a pitchers' duel all the way after the Painters had scored a pair of runs in the opening frame and the Marketmen tied it up with single runs in the third and fifth.

Pitching for Outdoor Supermarket was Beech, who struck out 14.

Another pitcher who is on the way to make a real name for himself is Ken (no-hit) Piercy, who throws for Totems in the Hampton Little League which officially opened Saturday at Hampton Park.

Pitching against Suncrest Cubs, Piercy pitched his second straight opening day no-hitter as Totems scored a 5-0 win.

In the second half of the double-header Beavers and Cougars played to a 5-5 tie.

At Jaycee Little League Park, American and National Little Leagues opened their season with a double-header that was featured by the towering home run hit by Oliver Goldsmith, for Odd Fellows, to tie the game with Rotary at 5-all. Gary Hunt went on to walk, steal second, and score the winning run for Odd Fellows.

Walks counted heavily against Kinsmen in the second game as their pitchers gave up 16 as Tuglets, won 9-6.

At Windsor Park, Capital City Colt League play got underway with a double-header that saw Dowell's Cartage take a 2-0 decision over Morrison Chevrolet's behind the three-hit pitching of Barry Harvey. Victoria Tire Herald won, 4-3, against Pacific Sheet Metal Furnaces on a fifth-inning triple by Barry Williams that sent Phil Meyer across.

In the Esquimalt-Victoria West Little League opening day double-header Saturday Bruce Shaw struck out nine batters and gave up only two hits as Foresters won 6-2 over Yarrows Dodgers.

In the opener, Don Lancaster pitched two-hit ball for Merchants as they scored in every inning to beat Lions 7-3.

Mounties Defy Act; Play Sunday

7,000 Fans Attend; Police Take Names

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast League played their first game of Sunday baseball this weekend under threat of prosecution.

But that didn't stop a husky crowd of 7,000 persons from attending the game.

Their enjoyment was dampened by the fact that Mounties lost the first game of the Sunday doubleheader against San Diego Padres, 9-7. Mounties were leading 1-0 in the second when the game was called at the end of the sixth inning because of a 6 p.m. Sunday curfew. The game will be finished tonight.

Before Sunday's tilt, the Lord's Day Alliance said that Mounties would be prosecuted if they went ahead.

Rev. Harold T. Allen, B.C. and Alberta executive secretary, said the Lord's Day Alliance asked Mayor Fred Hume of Vancouver to warn the "proper authorities" to take proper action to deal with an interference with the law.

POLICE CHECK

Police checked the crowd at Sunday's game and took several names. They also questioned manager Cedric Tallis of the Mounties.

Said Tallis: "Whatever happens, we're going to play next Sunday anyway." Los Angeles held a one-game lead today, thanks to two tightly-pitched victories and the power-packed bat of Steve Bilko.

The Angels moved to the top Sunday by dropping Hollywood 2-0 and 11-1.

San Francisco split with second-spot Seattle, winning the first game 8-3 and then losing 3-2.

Sacramento beat Portland 5-2, then lost 5-0.

Red Adams, backed by Bilko's two-run homer, blanked the Stars for Los Angeles in the second as pitcher Bob Darnell held Hollywood to five hits.

It was the sixth homer of the season for Bilko.

The second Hollywood-Los Angeles game was played under protest by the Stars after the umpires reversed a decision in the fourth. They first ruled that Wally Lammers was tagged out on a rundown between third and home but after a conference allowed him to go back to third, saying his base path had been blocked by Leo Rodriguez.

Schedule Heavy In Minor Boxla

The asphalt in Stevenson Park won't get much of a chance to cool off this week with games and practices scheduled in all divisions of senior and minor lacrosse as Memorial Arena surface has been given over to the Industrial Fair.

The Senior "B" League opener is slated to go Tuesday night at 6.30 between Foul Bay and Jokers. In the Pee-wee division there have been a number of East Indian boys turn out for practice, and if a few more show up, it is planned to form a team.

Park schedule for the week follows:

Tonight, 6.00 p.m.—Juvenile boys; Tuesday, 7.15 p.m.—Pee-wee boys; 6.30 p.m.—Foul Bay vs. Jokers; Wednesday, 7.15 p.m.—Bantams; 6.00 p.m.—Juvenile "A"; 7.00 p.m.—Shamrocks; Thursday, 7.15 p.m.—Bantams; 6.30 p.m.—J. Rocks vs. Jokers; Friday, 6.00 p.m.—Juveniles; Saturday, 9.00 a.m.—Pee-wees; 10.45 a.m.—Bantams.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Tommy Tibbs, 130, Boston, outpitched Mickey Northrup, 133½, Los Angeles, 30.

OLYMPIC ROWING HEROES SURVIVE CHILLY DUNKING

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia's Olympic medal-winning rowers got a dunking Sunday when they challenged Vancouver's tide-swept Burrard Inlet.

The University of B.C. and Vancouver Rowing Club eights were headed toward nearby Deep Cove for a meet when they decided to try the middle of the channel, rather than the customary edge.

They made it down centre as far as the Second Narrows Bridge, despite a heavy west wind. Then came a rip tide which broke one shell in half, and threw the other around. All 16 rowers were later picked up by a tug and the damaged shell taken in tow.

Northwest International Semi-Pro Baseball League swung into action Saturday when Tom Goode, Liberal MP for Burnaby-Richmond, threw out the first ball to open the game between Vancouver Young Liberals and Burnaby Athletics.

Competing with the Pacific Coast League Mounties for support, the teams had a turnout of more than 500 fans to cheer them on as Young Liberals scored a 7-6 win over the A's on 10 hits and four Burnaby errors.

Burnaby's six runs were scored on 11 hits and three Liberal errors.

Opening game in Victoria will feature Burnaby against Farmer Construction in a doubleheader May 20 as part of the local Victoria Day celebrations at Athletic Park.

Barbarians Outclass B.C. Rugby All-Stars

VANCOUVER (CP)—The speed of the Barbarians, touring British rugby side, proved too much as they defeated the battling British Columbia All-Stars 19-6 at Empire Stadium here Saturday night.

The British team scored two goals, two tries and a penalty goal to the All-Stars' two penalties. At half time, the Barbarians led 6-3.

The game was marred by an injury to English forward C. R. Jacobs, who suffered a possible fractured hip in a goal-line collision with stand-off-half Ted Hunt.

Shortly after the interval Neil Henderson, the All-Stars' brilliant kicker, tied the score at 6-6 with a penalty goal. Throughout the game, Henderson proved himself a kicker in the Barbarians' own class.

The Barbarians ended freshly, but the All-Stars seemed to lose much of their wind in the final quarter.

Jacobs was off the field most

Aces took a firm grip on the series — never won by a visiting team since its start in 1954 — by defeating the Western Hockey League champions 4-2 for a 3-1 lead in the best-of-nine set. It was the first game between the two clubs which was decided by more than a single goal.

A crowd of 10,358 fans saw the Aces, Quebec Hockey League champs, score goals in every period. They led the game 4-0 before Regals scored twice in the last six minutes.

Stan Maxwell, Brent MacNab, Dick Gamble and Orval Tessier netted the Quebec tallies. Brothers Elliott and Bob Chorley counted for the westerners.

SLOW START

Maxwell potted Aces' first goal just past the mid point of the opening period. Regals netminder Lucien Dechene could not block the shot—fired from 10 feet out during a scramble.

Halfway through the second period defenceman MacNab made it 2-0 with a partly-screened slap shot from just inside the blue line. Gamble made it 3-0 at 6:31 of the final frame.

Tessier rounded out the Quebec scoring less than two minutes later.

A penalty to Gamble set the stage for the first Regals goal. Elliott Chorley triggered a high, partly screened 30-footer after a pass from defenceman Bob Chrystal to break Miller's shutout at 14:51. Bob Chorley got the final tally — a 10-10 footer — at 18:33 after a pass from right winger Len Haley.

Trainer Salves Willie's 'Rock'

Iron Leige Wins Derby Thriller On Shoemaker's Misjudgment

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UP)—Willie Shoemaker took the rap for Gallant Man's nose defeat by Iron Liege in the Kentucky Derby, but trainer John Nerud today blamed improper pole markings at Churchill Downs for the $100,000 "rock."

"I blame the race track more than Willie for the error," said Nerud, who talked Shoemaker into riding Gallant Man after the colt's regular pilot, John Choquette, was suspended almost on the eve of the classic.

Nerud then went on to explain that at most race tracks the poles used to designate the final furlong, the last sixteenth (110 yards) and the finish line are varied colored.

"All the poles are the same color at Churchill Downs," he added. "And the finish line should be plainly marked, especially when they have the winner's circle where it is, up the track from the finish."

LOSES STRIDE
Because Shoemaker misjudged the finish line, Gallant Man was thrown off stride for only a fraction of a second, but to owner Ralph Lowe of Midland, Tex., it meant the difference between a first place pot of $107,950 and the runner-up prize of $25,000.

Nerud still isn't sure whether he will give Gallant Man another crack at Iron Liege in the Preakness at Pimlico May 18, but if he does run in the second of the Triple Crown classics, Shoemaker again will be in the saddle.

"I would be glad to have Shoemaker back on my horse," Nerud declared. "I can't think of a better boy."

Both Gallant Man and Bold Ruler, the Derby favorite who finished fourth, were heading back to New York today. Bold Ruler is expected to start in the Preakness, but Nerud wants to delay a decision on Gallant Man because "he is rather delicate . . . and he has had two rough races in a row."

Ben and Jimmy Jones, Calumet Farm's famed father-son trainer team, still consider Gen. Duke a better horse than Iron Liege and expect to have "The General" ready for the Preakness. The Jones boys reported Gen. Duke was "much better" Sunday and all the heat in his left front hoof had vanished.

When Gen. Duke was scratched from the Derby Saturday morning, Bill Hartack was switched from "The General" to Iron Liege, replacing Dave Erb. It was a big break for Hartack and he took full advantage of it, saving ground with Iron Liege most of the way to account for his first Derby victory.

But as long as derbies are discussed, racegoers will remember not how Iron Liege won this $3rd edition of the Rose Run but how Gallant Man and Wee Willie Shoemaker lost it.

De Vincenzo Cops $5,000 At Colonial
FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Roberto de Vincenzo, the happy Argentine, won the $25,000 Colonial national invitation golf tournament Sunday as Dick Mayer, La Jolla, Calif., followed a frustrating trail down the stretch.

De Vincenzo, professional of the Mexico City Country Club who plays only occasionally in the United States, fired a two-under-par 68-70 on final 36 holes for a total of 284 to bag the $5,000 first money.

Mayer, who had taken a four-stroke lead over the field through the third round, either led or tied de Vincenzo through 63 holes but fell a stroke back at 65, pulled even at 273, and then lost it on the 17th green where his second shot was in a trap 50 feet from the hole.

Mayer wound up with three-under-par 67 and 75 on the two rounds played Sunday, giving him a 72-hole total of 285 and winning him $3,000.

Al Balding, Toronto, hit 73-79-71 for a total of 294. Stan Leonard, Lacute, Que., had 73-76-74 for 223.

HAVANA—Angel Robinson Garcia, 129, Havana, outpointed Orlando Echevarria, 128, Havana, 12.

Brooks Wins Main Event; Gilmour Hurt

A crowd of 2,800 fans at Western Speedway Saturday night watched Lamont Brooks, working as though he hadn't had a winter's lay-off, spin to first place in the main event with a 10-length lead over what was left of a starting field of 22.

A spine-chilling end-over-end flip by Bert Gilmour in the 10th lap caused action to cease and the race to be restarted.

Brooks, last year's Island champion, won out over Dick Wiloughby, who had taken first place in the trophy dash and the first heat, and Dick Varley, who placed second in both events, as the lead changed hands five times in a nip-and-tuck battle with Ray Pottinger, Nannimo, and Red Burke, also of the hub city.

Gilmour was rushed to Royal Jubilee Hospital suffering from lacerations and a slight concussion. His condition was later reported as satisfactory.

Two championship teams were crowned in minor soccer play on the weekend with Lansdowne Trojans, of Division V, upsetting Eagles 3-1 Saturday, at S. J. Willis School, to take the Baxter Trophy and division II opponents facing Nannimo 4-1 at Nannimo, Sunday, to take the division I championship.

Trojan scorers were Don McCormick, with two, and Mike Jolly while Jim Clark scored to keep Eagles, Lower Island and league champions, from being blanked.

John Youson scored goals in each half of the up-island game while Bob Taylor and Larry Brown added singles to the total.

Sox Fans Say 'Oh-Oh' As Yanks Start Go-Go

By The Associated Press
Chicago's new "go-go" White Sox had that old "oh-oh" look Sunday after New York Yankees swept a three-game weekend series at Comiskey Park with a breezy 4-2, 3-0 doubleheader victory.

The world champs, junking the Sox' five-game winning streak, now have a six-game success string of their own and a half-game lead in the American League.

In the National, Milwaukee Braves failed to wilt, pushing into a two-game lead over Brooklyn again with a come-back 10-7 romp against the Dodgers on the hitting of Henry Aaron and the near-perfect relief pitching of Ernie Johnson.

The Cincinnati Redlegs wound up only a game behind Brooklyn in third, running the season's longest winning streak in either league to seven games with a 6-2, 7-3 sweep at Pittsburgh. St. Louis also won a twin bill, belting Philadelphia 8-4 and 2-0.

SPLIT BILL
New York Giants and Chicago Cubs split their pair, the Cubs winning the opener 8-3 in 10 innings and the Giants taking the second game 6-2.

In the other AL games, Boston Red Sox, ending a four-game losing streak but losing Ted Williams with a bruised elbow after he was struck by a pitch, took a pair from Cleveland 5-1 and 4-3. The Detroit Tigers won their fourth in a row, defeating Baltimore 3-1. And Kansas City, joining Detroit and Cleveland at 500, hammered Washington 7-2.

Bobby Shantz, the stubby "sore-armed" southpaw the Yankees got from Kansas City, became the first Yankee pitcher to gain two complete games with a six-strikeout, seven-hit job in the opener. Mickey Mantle who pulled a groin muscle in the nightcap, walloped his third home run with a man on as the Yankees broke up the opener with three runs in the fourth inning to beat Billy Pierce.

THROWS THREE-HITTER
Young Johnny Kucks threw a three-hitter in the nightcap for the Yankees.

The Dodgers knocked out Bob Buhl, who beat them eight times in 1956, for a 5-2 lead in the first inning behind Sal Maglie. But after Maglie gave way to a pinch-hitter with a 7-3 lead, the Braves scored three in the fourth, on Aaron's home run, and three more in the fifth against Don Bessent and Rene

Valdes. Johnson, in his first 1957 appearance, set down the first 16 men he faced; gave up a bloop single and walk in the ninth, then shut the gate. Aaron wound up with four hits. Danny O'Connell and Bill Bruton each had three in the Braves' 16 total.

The half-time score was 7-7. It was 10-9 at the end of the third quarter. Nanaimo pulled ahead with three goals to New Westminster's one in the final quarter.

Nanaimo now shares the lead with Victoria Shamrocks, with two wins and one loss each. New Westminster has won one and lost one. Vancouver Pilseners have lost two games.

Address your questions to "Ask Andy," Victoria Daily Times.

Andy sends a complete 15-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia to Donna Skelton, aged 12, of Daly City, Calif., for her question:

How Did the Indians Reach America Before Columbus?

Most experts agree that the first Americans came here from northern Asia. They may have arrived about 20,000 years before Columbus set foot in the new world. We do not know the exact day because no records were kept of the great event. We can assume that the Indians came originally from northern Asia because they resemble the Mongoloid peoples of that area. There is geological evidence to show that they could have come from Asia.

When they came is a matter still open for more study. Since these first Americans kept no records of their history, we have to estimate how long they have been here. One way is to figure the age of buried bones and weapons. Another way is to figure how long it took the Indians to do this or that. For instance, it may have taken them 10,000 years to cultivate their corn from the wild grasses. Taken together, the known facts indicate that the first Americans have been here for 20,000 years. New evidence from older relics may prove they have been here much longer.

They certainly arrived before the dawn of history. Man was a wanderer over the face of the earth. He was a hunter, for he had not yet learned to cultivate plants or fledge flocks. The cruel glaciers of the Ice Age drove him from certain hunting grounds. The land was pushed out of shape and solid ice covered some of the seas. There may have been a bridge across the Bering Strait, joining Alaska with Asia.

There was no one there to report the first arrival. But we can imagine what it was like. It may have been a band of agile, sharp-eyed hunters. It may have been a man and his family wandering in search of food or shelter. If it was 20,000 years ago, the massive glaciers were in plain sight. Chances are, these wanderers found what they wanted in Alaska. There were spaces between the glaciers and wild life was plentiful. They may have crossed the Rockies and found an ice free corridor leading from Alaska right down to the south. In any case, these first groups of American Indians were followed by others.

Through the years they crossed from Asia in great numbers. Sometimes it was a small band, sometimes a whole tribe. Once across, each group decided on its own route. Some stayed in the frozen north and some hugged the western coast. Some found the wide plains and some settled in the eastern mountains. Some stayed in the southern deserts and others went way down through Central and South America.

Alsbury Quits CCF Party

Election Statement Blamed for Action

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tom Alsbury, a top labor official here and former provincial president of the CCF, has quit the party.

"I am not now a member of any political party," Alsbury said Saturday in an interview. He is understood to have broken with the party at a closed session during the recent annual meeting of the provincial CCF Federation.

He had been criticized for a statement issued prior to the 1956 British Columbia general election in which he and other labor officials urged Liberal and CCF supporters to vote for Liberal candidates in two ridings and to vote for the CCF in two other constituencies in an effort to defeat Social Credit candidates.

Mr. Alsbury declined to comment on the criticism, saying, "I'm not prepared to divulge what went on in a closed session."

Mr. Alsbury, 52-year-old teacher and vice-president of the Vancouver Labor Council, was four times defeated as CCF candidate for mayor.

Alex B. Macdonald, present CCF party president in B.C., commented: "There's been no action of any kind taken by the CCF against Tom Alsbury. Whether he holds active membership or not, I'm sure he remains a good friend of the CCF."

Lorne Switzer, 25, Prince Albert, Sask., died almost instantly when a car fleeing from the police missed a turn on Highway 97, about 15 miles east of Kelowna. The RCMP said the car was driven by Stewart McLeod, Dawson Creek, B.C., who was charged with criminal negligence.

Churchman Scores U.K. H-Bomb Tests

LONDON (Reuters) — A leading English churchman Sunday accused the British government of planning hazardous H-bomb tests for "self-aggrandizement" and "power" rather than self-defence.

In a sermon at St. Paul's Cathedral, Canon Lewis John Collins also accused Foreign Secretary Lloyd of cheating in blaming Communists for the opposition to Britain's forthcoming H-bomb tests at Christmas Island in the South Pacific.

Calling on all Christians to oppose H-bomb tests, the canon exclaimed: "Why in Heaven's name do church people sit by and countenance—if not possibly support—the making and testing of hydrogen bombs?"

MAROONED GIRL IN JAPAN LIVED 5 DAYS ON ICE, JUICE

TOKYO (Reuters) — Police today rescued a 24-year-old Japanese girl who had lain on a bleak mountainside for five days with a broken leg, existing on ice and orange juice.

Kazuko Sasaki told rescuers she fell and broke her leg April 29, a day after setting out to cross the 6,060-foot-high Tanigawadake Mountain range in central Japan.

She said she managed to crawl into her sleeping bag and occasionally mixed up some orange juice and ice to quench her thirst. Apart from her broken leg, she was none the worse for her ordeal.

Bandit Sobs as Sister Bares Family Trouble

'For God's Sake, Betty, Shut Up'

A Victoria bank robber burst into tears in B.C. Appeal Court today and cried out to his sister in the witness box:

"For God's sake, Betty, shut up!"

Colin W. L. Chalmers, 24, broke down and sobbed hysterically while his sister, Mrs. Betty Coleman, 3450 Doncaster Drive, told of his shock and grief when his father was burned to death in a nursing home fire in 1950.

Chalmers said he worked hard in the construction industry during 1956 and had a car and $600 saved. When his brother came home on leave he loaned him some money "because he needed it."

Chalmers said he worked hard in the construction industry during 1956 and had a car and $600 saved. When his brother came home on leave he loaned him some money "because he needed it."

Chalmers was brought from Oakalla penitentiary to appeal a sentence of 20 years he received in the B.C. Assize Court March 28 for armed robbery of the James Bay branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce on Feb. 11.

He was found guilty of stealing $3,640 at gunpoint from teller Peter Margetts.

Chalmers appeared in court between two burly Mounties. He refused legal aid and addressed a passionate plea in his defence to Mr. Justice Sidney Smith.

Mr. Justice H. I. Bird and Mr. Justice Davey, who heard the appeal.

Besides his sister, he called numerous friends who testified to his "generosity and helpfulness" and his "acute sensitivity" which "drove him to desperation" when his family were in difficulties.

Mrs. Coleman said after her father's death Colin told her he wished he could die, too, and be able to "go where Dad has gone."

Chalmers burst into tears and told her to stop.

"I am sorry, Colin," his sister replied from the witness stand. "I am just trying to make them understand how you felt."

The bank robber continued sobbing heavily while Mrs. Coleman gave evidence. She told how he had sung in a church choir, belonged to a Sunday school and "believed what he was taught," and of his service in the Canadian Air Cadets.

"He was always deeply sensitive and easily hurt," she said. "At school he suffered from acne and when other children teased away from him he played truant."

Chalmers again broke down when Mr. Justice Sidney Smith invited him to address the bench.

"You must take hold of yourself," the judge said. "Keep calm and tell us what you have to say."

Chalmers recounted the story of his father's death in the nursing home and said if the nurse on duty had been "looking after her business instead of running around with boy friends, my father would be alive today."

"I committed this crime on an impulse—without intending to harm anyone," he continued. "When the detectives took the gun from me, the safety catch was on and there were no shells in it at all."

"When they arrested me I told them I was guilty."

Chalmers said he worked hard in the construction industry during 1956 and had a car and $600 saved. When his brother came home on leave he loaned him some money "because he needed it."

PRICE OF PROGRESS TO CITY: $30,000 MORE FOR GARBAGE

Changing methods of home heating have resulted in a $30,000 increase in Victoria's garbage collection costs, according to estimates presented to city council today.

City engineer, James C. Garnett, said new uses for waste sawmill products have resulted in: Less firewood; more use of coal, meaning more ash; more use of fuel oil, meaning less garbage burned in homes, more for city disposal.

Result: $254,242 need this year as against $224,953 in 1956.

Council Slices Budget by 1 Mill

New Public Works Program, Maintenance Cut $95,000

By PETER LOUDON
Victoria's 1957 public works program suffered a $95,000 setback today when aldermen completed thinning out the departmental estimates.

A policy of cutting out mountains and adding in mole-hills has reduced the provisional budget by $98,717—well over one mill.

The provisional budget had called for a record $7,596,550 outlay this year and a 4½ per cent increase, equal to a 10 per cent boost in taxes.

To wipe out the threatened tax increase, in its entirety, another $250,000 must be chopped from the budget—or that amount must be raised in new revenue through the business tax announced last week.

The tax must first replace the $300,000 raised last year by trade licensing. The mayor and most aldermen apparently hope to keep the levy on business at the same level.

NORMAL EXPENSE
Friday, aldermen reduced the new projects planned for public works. Today, they hacked $42,717 from normal running expenses of the works department.

When city engineer James C. Garnett opposed cutting the streets depreciation-replacement program, he was told by Mayor Percy Scurrell:

"You must get along on what we can afford to give you."

The maintenance program called for a $208,390 expenditure. It had been cut last year and the engineer feared falling behind on his scheme to keep all present streets at a fair level of repair.

"This ensures all existing streets will be maintained systematically each year. We must have the full amount or we can't maintain them in good order."

Council cut the vote by $18,390.

ARGUMENT
Public works chairman, Ald. M. H. Mooney also argued against cutting maintenance programs.

"Are you willing to take the responsibility for a millrate increase?" the mayor asked him sharply.

"I am if it's for the good of the people. We have lots of frills—the mentioned parks—we could cut, but services should come first."

Also dropped were proposed repairs to Johnson Street Bridge decking ($7,000), Dallas Road seawall repairs ($15,535), city share of local improvements ($2,000), maintenance to city yard buildings ($1,000), surveys ($500).

Nanaimo Man In Hospital Here After Assault
A Nanaimo Good Samaritan, who was assaulted by three men he tried to help, is in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today, suffering from a fractured skull.

William L. Leakey Saturday offered to help three men whose car nearly overturned outside his home. Two of them attacked him and beat him with an iron pipe or a stone, then fled in the car, an eyewitness told police.

Mr. Leakey was transferred here from Nanaimo hospital.

Unique Ceremony Planned At Christ Church Cathedral
Choir of men and boys will sing from the towers of Christ Church Cathedral early Thursday, May 30, in a unique-to-Victoria—ceremony marking Ascension Day.

Singing from the towers—highest point in a cathedral—is a tradition in some parts of Europe on Ascension Day, Dean Brian Whitlow said.

The choir will climb a spiral staircase inside the cathedral and then a perpendicular ladder to reach the apron between the two towers. Members will sing two hymns of praise to God at 8.15 a.m., and their music will be heard as far away as Douglas Street, the dean said. "We've tried it once in rehearsal and you can hear them beautifully."

The short ceremony will mark the first Ascension Day since the scaffolding was removed from the cathedral.

Coalition Idea Denied By Solon Low
National Social Credit Leader Solon Low said today his party would never enter a coalition with the Conservatives regardless of the outcome of the June 10 federal election.

Mr. Low said at a press conference that Social Credit would consider "co-operating" with either the Conservatives or Liberals if either were elected as a minority government.

"It would be our duty to help maintain stability in the country until another election could be called," he said.

Mr. Low said there was "no justification" for the coalition report made in a Vancouver newspaper Saturday after a press conference in the mainland city.

"We certainly wouldn't coalesce or amalgamate," he said. Pressed by reporters for a prediction of the outcome of the election, the Social Credit leader said there was an "outside possibility" of a minority government being elected.

Wage Protest Province Wide
Forty-six local branches of the B.C. Government Employees' Association are meeting throughout the province this week to protest the government's refusal to give them wage increases.

Some 300 members—from all parts of Vancouver Island will hold a protest meeting at Nanaimo next Friday at 8 p.m. All Victoria members wishing to attend will be given free bus transportation.

"Provincial government employees are irritated because MLAs and the cabinet voted themselves more money this year although the cabinet refused to give raises to government employees," H. A. Carney, secretary of the Victoria branch, said today.

"There is considerable unrest throughout the province on this issue."

MEETING TONIGHT
The mass protest kicks off tonight with a meeting of 1,000 employees in Vancouver. The meeting is at 8 p.m. in the Pender Auditorium, 339 West Pender.

"It is the first mass meeting the association has ever called here," said E. I. Fox, executive secretary of the Vancouver-New Westminster branch.

Attending the Island meeting at Nanaimo next Friday will be delegates from Victoria, Courtenay, Alberni, Duncan and Nanaimo.

Leading the Victoria delegation are executives Larry G. Huck, Miss Joan Gower, H. Gordon Moore and H. A. Carney.

Other protest meetings are being held all over B.C.

No Rubbery Odor to These Bright Hot Water Bottles

By PENNY SAVER

What next? We are a pampered lot, you know! Not only do we have daintily tinted hot water bottles, but now we have perfumed ones. Really... they come in rose, jasmine and violet fragrance and shade. They have a turn-over top that ensures that no water will leak out. English-made, the bottles are selling at $1.89. The light fragrance of the rubber is a pleasant change from the rather musty smell that rubber usually has.

Gloves that have been taking a beating all winter, aren't likely to be very fresh-looking and smart for summer, so be prepared to stock up on dainty, lightweight gloves to carry you through the warm months. I have seen in town a wonderful sale of sheer nylon gloves that have light embroidery on the backs or at the short cuffs. Some are shirred, featuring above-the-wrist length, while others just meet the cuff of your jacket or dress. Choose from white, black, or pastels to complement your sun-time outfits. The price is very low... 89 cents a pair.

We discovered in our house that our collection of long-playing records was getting a little out of hand and finding a particular record took some time. Of course, the answer was a metal record rack that holds the records upright, easily removed, easily put back. You can buy black wrought iron racks with an over-the-top handle. This rack will hold a sizeable collection and is priced at $6.96. If you find that albums need a resting place, too, you may buy another style rack that has a shelf above the record rack. Now all your records are in one place, the albums neatly stacked on the shelf and the single cartoned records in the metal slots. Your collection will receive better care and keeping it all in one place will be no chore at all. This larger rack costs $9.95.

Roaming into a jewelry store, I noticed some very dainty pearl stud earrings for pierced ears. Set in sterling silver are tiny pearls that every woman loves. The earrings are French and cost $1.95.

About Open House for High School Graduates:

My son will graduate soon from high school and I would like to have a family gathering. Would it be proper for me to send out invitations saying I will have open house from 3 to 6 o'clock? I would like to serve a buffet lunch. Would it be proper to have the invitations written this way? How soon should I mail them?

A "family gathering" and an "open house" are quite different. If you are having a family party, why not phone everybody or write notes to invite the relatives? An "open house" or an "at home", which are pretty much the same, involve many people, and if that is what you want, then you would have to mail invitations. You can hardly say that you are serving buffet lunch because of the late afternoon hours. Buffet supper would be a better compromise. The wording for the invitations can go something like this: (top line) Mr. and Mrs. Mathew S. King (second line), Mathew S. King, Junior (third line) "at home" (fourth line) Sunday, the ninth of June, (fifth line) from three until six o'clock, (sixth line) your address. If

Which Style Swim Suit Will Fit Your Figure?

With swimming days practically upon us it is time to think in terms of swim suits, play clothes and beach wear. There is a most flattering style of bathing suit for every type figure.

For instance, the two-piece suit is unbecoming to the matronly silhouette. In fact it takes a slim figure, and an especially slim waist, to get away with one of these. Not only does the bare midriff expose any rolls you may have, but the contrast in colors between the white strip of skin and the suit makes you look wider. Color contrasts are used to make a very tall slim woman look shorter and fatter.

For this same reason the two-piece suit is flattering to the tall, slim woman, unless her ribs are too prominent. The one-piece suit which fits snugly at the waist and has a full skirt is also good for the tall, slim gal.

The woman who has a few extra pounds should avoid extremes. She looks best in a one-piece suit which has a skirt, but without fullness. Of course dark colors such as black and navy blue are more slenderizing than lighter, brighter ones.

Here are a few more hints to keep you lovely looking during summer fun:

1. If you are self-conscious about a small bust, remember that you now can buy swim suits with built-in falsies.
2. You also can get a waterproof mascara and make-up base.
3. A strip of chamois placed around your head under your bathing cap, at its edge, will help keep your hair dry.
4. The bathing suit rules apply to play clothes, also.
5. Pedal pushers are much more flattering to the mature woman than very short shorts. If you still have a few extra pounds and you missed my nine-day reducing diet, you may want it for a loss of five to 10 pounds in nine days time. If so, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of, this newspaper.

Princess Alexandra Lodge No. 18, Daughters of England meeting Wednesday at 7.30 p.m., in Orange Hall.

Simpson-Faris Wedding Vows In Alberni

In St. Andrew's United Church, Alberni, recently, Rev. Roy Rodgers performed the ceremony, in which were united Miss Shirley Bernice Faris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph William Faris, of Alberni, and Norman James Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Simpson, 2930 Qu'Appelle Street, Victoria.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white gown of net and nylon fashioned with bodice inset of lace. The sweetheart neckline was edged with pearls. Her only jewelry was the groom's gift, a pearl necklace. She carried a small white Bible topped with a spray of pink flowers.

Maid of honor, Miss Shirley Reblin, wore a sea green ballerina-length gown and carried a spray of pink carnations. Her headband was of green net and lilac flowers. The bride's sister, Miss Elaine Faris, wore a lilac-toned ballerina-length gown and carried yellow carnations. Her headband was of lilac net and blossoms. The groom had Fred Reed as best man and ushers were Carl Nessen and John Tupper.

A reception party was held at the Barclay Hotel, where bouquets of daffodils and primroses formed the decorations. Rev. Rodgers, who performed the ceremony, proposed the toast to the bride's future happiness.

For her going-away outfit, the bride donned a navy, fitted suit with pink accessories. Following a honeymoon trip to Salt Lake City and the Grand Canyon, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson will live at Campbell River.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Nickells, 2396 Lincoln Road. Rev. Thomas Bailey conducted the service for the infant, who wore a christening robe made by her late great-grandmother, Mrs. George Nunn. Godparents are Mrs. William Benson Smith, Victoria, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown, Mukilteo, Wash. Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Alaric, Oliver, B.C. Following the service, a tea was held at the home of the paternal grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. B. E. Nickells, 1857 Beach Drive.

Calgary To Be Home For Young Just-Weds

In a morning ceremony in Our Lady of Lourdes Church recently, Miss Colette Marguerite Grenier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Grenier, 3028 Tillium Road, became the bride of William Frank Dawson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dawson, Thomas Street. Father M. J. McNamara officiated at the ceremony and said the nuptial Mass during which Miss Leona Hanley sang "Panis Angelicus" and "Ave Maria".

The petit and lovely bride was charming in a ballerina-length gown of silk organza. Dainty features of the dress were lily point sleeves and a scoop-neckline surrounded by sequins and seed pearls. Her veil was held to a tiny coronet. A pearl necklace gift of the groom, was her only jewelry. She carried a cascade of red roses. The bride's father gave her in marriage.

Miss Verona Dawson, sister of the groom, was maid of honor and Miss Lynda Grenier, sister of the bride, flower girl. They wore gowns of pale blue with white accessories and carried bouquets of pink carnations. Mr. Dawson had Ross Grenier, brother of the bride as best man. Ushers were Stan Bell and Pat Connor.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Olde England Inn, where Paul Jeanotte proposed the toast to the bride's happiness. A second reception was held at the Tillium Road home of the bride's parents. For the occasion, the bride's mother chose a floral patterned dress of taffeta with matching champagne-toned duster coat and copper accessories.

Bride, Merle Beanlands Attended By Trio Gowned in Pastel Shades

Three attendants, gowned in springtime pastel shades formed the entourage for bride, Miss Merle Karen Beanlands, whose marriage to George Alec Rogers took place recently in Metropolitan United Church.

In a setting of plum and peach blossoms, tulips and daffodils, the marriage was solemnized in a candlelit ceremony performed by Dr. F. E. H. James.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Denis Beanlands, 3978 Douglas Street, was given in marriage by her father. For the ceremony she wore a bal-lerine-length gown of pristine white taffeta fashioned with low, rounded neckline outlined with soft scallops, and long sleeves tapering to lily-points at the wrists. The full skirt cascaded in soft folds from an empire waistline into greater fullness at the back. A crown of seed pearls and iridescent sequins held the fingertip veil of illusion net bordered with lace flowers. Her bouquet was of yellow roses and white narcissi. Her only jewelry was of pearls, the groom's gift.

Mrs. Lew Landess, Miss Denise Cave and Miss Grace Beanlands were attendants in dresses of mauve, pale green and yellow, respectively. Mrs. Landess, matron of honor; Miss Cave, bridesmaid and Miss Beanlands, junior bridesmaid. Their accessories matched their dresses, and bouquets were of white narcissi with contrasting ribbon.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rogers, 821 Rogers Avenue, had Phil Lindgren as best man. Ushers were Glen Beanlands and Howard Griffin.

A reception was held in an Esquimalt Hall, where T. P. O'Grady proposed the toast to the bride. A mauve and yellow floral motif was used in the decoration of the hall. The brides' table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake on silver stands, and set-in mauve tulle with pink rosebuds and silver leaves. Candles and flowers completed the table arrangement.

For travelling, the bride wore a beige tweed fitted suit with small pink hat, matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations and blue hyacinths. Following a tour through the western United States, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will live at 1029 Linden Avenue.

In Honor of The Bride

Miss Barbara Shoemaker, whose marriage to Mr. Trevor James takes place this month, was honored by Metropolitan United Church flower guild at their meeting recently at the home of Mrs. H. C. Steele. A green and gold table lamp was presented to the bride-elect. Mrs. R. J. C. Smith, president, made the presentation. Mauve orchid corsages were presented to Miss Shoemaker, her mother, Mrs. F. V. Shoemaker, and the groom-elect's mother, Mrs. F. E. H. James.

Staff and former staff members of the Arena concessions gathered at the home of Mrs. Helen Carmichael, Morrison Street to honor Darylne Robertson. Upon her arrival the bride-elect received a corsage of red roses while her mother, and the groom-elect's mother received pink carnations. Miss Robertson was presented with a crystal "lazy Susan" and cups and saucers.

TV with EILEEN HECKART STARS IN STUDIO ONE DRAMA ON C-11 AT 9

By PHIL LEE, Times TV Editor

CHATTER—As anyone who owns a TV set knows, it costs money to keep the appliance in tip-top order. So when HMC Cordova recently donated a television set to the Gorge Road Hospital there was some conjecture as to where the money was coming from to look after it. Happy to relate, therefore, that members of the Victoria chapter of Radio Electronics Technicians Association have jumped into the breach. They've promised to look after that end of the deal.

Incidentally the set is getting a warm reception at the hospital. As Mrs. Florence Mutrie, hospital administrator, wrote recently: "The joy the gift is giving to those whose activities are limited is very much appreciated by the patients, board of directors and the staff."

CLARENCE CAMPBELL, president of the National Hockey League, says that he plans to approach the CBS with a proposal to televise 21 games next season. This, if it goes through, would more than double the number of matches presented over the network this last season.

Ten Saturday afternoon games were shown in the 1956-57 season and Campbell said he would try to fit 11 more into the forthcoming schedule. He estimated that seven games on the expanded program would be played in Chicago and the rest allotted among New York, Boston and Detroit.

Six league owners have already expressed unanimous approval of continuing the league's TV program.

Job Picture Brightening In Victoria

First major drop in the number of unemployed persons occurred in Victoria during the past week, and there are now 521 fewer people seeking work, the National Employment Office reported today.

This reduction was fairly evenly divided between men's and women's files, the men's files showing 269 and the women's 252 fewer applications for work.

There were slightly more vacancies for construction and lumber workers. Power linemen are in demand for a job out of town.

In the women's section, demand continues for domestics, waitresses and stenographers. Cooks are in fair demand.

KREMLIN SHAKEUP?

Wednesday Deadline On Shuffle

WASHINGTON (UP)—U.S. officials said today Moscow may reveal this week whether the Soviet Union's high command is undergoing an important shakeup.

The Supreme Soviet (parliament) on Tuesday will meet to consider Russia's economic problems and other affairs of state. These meetings frequently have disclosed important shifts in the Kremlin hierarchy.

Officials also are awaiting word on whether any high Soviet leader might have been absent Wednesday at the May Day parade in Moscow. No reports have been received here yet that any Soviet bigwigs were missing. The official Soviet photograph of the parade reviewing party is still to be published and cameras were barred from the parade area.

One name is missing in the speculation about a possible Kremlin reshuffle. It is Nikita Khrushchev, powerful first secretary of the Communist party.

His star was reported to have lost some lustre during last fall's Hungarian revolt, and general satellite unrest. But harsh repressive measures, however, seem to have strengthened his grip as the No. 1 man inside the Soviet Union.

This Supreme Soviet meeting could shed some light on recent rumors that former Soviet premier Georgi Malenkov, Stalin's protégé, may become premier again.

Comic Strip Cartoonist Milton Caniff Ailing

Caniff draws the cartoon strip Steve Canyon and originated another strip, Terry and the Pirates.

Blast Kills Man

BARRIE, Ont. (CP)—One man was killed and another injured Sunday night in an explosion that demolished the barhouse.

Barrie Tannery, 36, is engineer Fred Tannery's brother. He was found beneath the rubble more than an hour after 25-year-old Cecil Dunnette was rescued and taken to hospital with undetermined injuries.

EVERYTHING 'FOUND' ON NEW CADILLAC

DETROIT (AP)—An automobile for which no extras need be bought is in production on the assembly lines of one of the industry's leading producers—but this unusual advantage is reflected on the price tag. It's Cadillac's new Eldorado Brougham, on which even air-conditioning is "standard" equipment. It also has an air-suspension system—the first American-made passenger car to replace steel springs with air bellows. With a list price of more than $13,000, it is the highest-priced production car made by an American auto company.

General Motors and Cadillac engineers demonstrated the newest "prestige" car at the GM technical centre near here.

NURSES' SALARIES HIT

VANCOUVER—Miss Evelyn E. Hood, director of personnel services for the Registered Nurses' Association of B.C., charged here that hospitals are dodging "realistic adjustments in salaries."

She said that in 13 cases it is necessary to apply for conciliation officers in seeking wage increases. "In only one of these was an agreement effected at this stage," she told more than 400 nurses attending the annual meeting of the association here.

Miss Hood said that 216 nurses are immediately needed to fill vacancies throughout the province.

School Concert At Royal Oak 'Outstanding'

A spring concert at Royal Oak High School Friday proved an outstanding success.

The evening included a variety of musical and novelty numbers, including a one-act play.

Three vocal groups performed: the girls of grade eight, the Glee Club and a trio of grade 12 girls, consisting of Marion Liddard, Jean Barlow and Jean Ross.

Soloists Jean Barlow and Jim Cathro drew audience applause. Bob Cuthbert led a group of boys imitating Elvis Presley, while a group of girls in pantomime, called the "Hep Cats," lived up to their name in performance.

Joy Anderton was excellent as pianist, while a display of tumbling was eye-catching.

Linda Chipping and Judy Adrian presented the "Charleston," while the play, "Our Dream House," brought a bevy of unexpected talent to viewers.

Players were Judy Noonan,

Frank Gibbons, Linda Squance, Billy Hillier, Susan Batterbury, Peggy McShane and Chris Searle.

One of the highlights of the evening was a brother-sister clarinet and trumpet duet by Susan and Adrian Batterbury.

'Canada's Greatest Challenge'

Following is the complete formal text of the address of Prime Minister at the Royal Theatre Saturday night.

For the past week, I have been working my way westward and speaking to my fellow Canadians on the record and program of the Liberal government.

Here I might let you in on a little secret. I enjoy election campaigns. I enjoy getting around Canada. I enjoy getting out of Ottawa and seeing for myself some of the fine things that Canadians have been doing in the last four years.

And I want to tell you that one of the most pleasant parts of the campaign so far was the trip by water to Vancouver Island today and the drive through the beautiful scenery along the Malahat Highway. And tomorrow I am going to Brentwood Bay to try out a fishing rod which the Western Canada Liberals presented to me at my birthday party last winter.

I can understand why so many Canadians, when they retire, move to Vancouver Island to enjoy the rich scenery and pleasant climate.

'... Not Retire'

The reason for my coming here, however, is to let you know that I would just as soon NOT retire!

This week I have been speaking of happenings and achievements within Canada. Tonight, I want you to take a look with me at what's going on outside our borders.

It seems to me that Victoria is a very suitable place to speak of the international scene because of your historic ties with Britain, and your position on the Pacific Ocean, which leads to the wisdom and wonders of the turbulent East.

Here, as throughout Canada, there is deep concern for the maintenance of peace in this world—too often torn by wide divisions and disagreements.

In a world at peace, Canada's future has a smiling face—but, in a world at war, not only Canada but civilization itself could lose its way to the future.

Canada's external policy, in a few words, is to work for peace; to work in a friendly fashion, with every other nation that is willing to try, with us, to root out the causes of war and solve differences between nations by peaceful means.

Now, there are limits to what any single nation can do for peace.

That is why Canada is closely allied with like-minded nations to maintain the military strength of the free world. For we believe that in unity there is strength, and that only through our united military strength can those countries which are opposed to our way of life be convinced of our determination to preserve it.

Tension Eased

In Europe we have witnessed a relaxation of tension in the last four years. The collective strength of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, backed up by the Strategic Air Command of the United States, has brought Soviet expansion to a halt.

In the Far East, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and United States undertakings with individual countries of that area have also helped maintain the uneasy but nevertheless welcome peace.

The Middle East situation is still unstable and uncertain. But the united stand of the Baghdad Pact members, including the United Kingdom, is improving the prospects of peace, and we are hopeful that the Eisenhower Doctrine will increase stability there as well.

In short, Communist expansion has pretty well ground to a halt. And in this "stand-easy" situation the free world has a chance to take stock of its position and improve it.

Certain basic factors of Canadian nationhood influence what Canada does in world affairs. Our location on the North American continent; our historic relations with Great Britain and the Commonwealth; our strong ties of race, culture and religion with Europe; and, more recently, our rapid economic growth—all have an important bearing on our position in world affairs.

Ours is a rather complex society here in Canada. For us to live and work together in harmony we must respect our ethnic and religious differences and avoid narrow regional interests. We must form habits of co-operation, mutual understanding and moderation.

Live Together

This we have done to a very encouraging degree. And this approach to getting along together within Canada is just as valuable in relations between nations. That may be one reason why Canada has made and is making such useful contributions to the nations, for all nations must find ways to live together in friendship and harmony.

Proud as we are of Canada, I think Canadians sometimes forget that we are a nation with a small population in a very populous world. There are, in fact, 150 or so world citizens for each one of us.

It would be a bit presumptuous of us to try to take the lead in matters affecting all nations. But at times we can bring good sense and goodwill to bear to help solve problems with which nations are struggling.

And there have been occasions in recent years when Canada was able, through her initiative and imagination, to help find solutions to world problems.

One such occasion arose last year. It was a tragic moment for the free world when our British and American friends divided last fall on the question of the Suez Canal. For if there is one thing certain about world affairs and the future, it is that Great Britain must go along arm in arm with the United States.

The nations of the Commonwealth were divided among themselves over the Suez issue. The Asiatic members felt strongly about the action of the United Kingdom and France in intervening in Egypt.

This was a sad time for us in Canada, for so many of us have blood and cultural ties with both Britain and France.

There was a widening gulf of misunderstanding between the Mother of Parliaments and the other parliaments that had received their inspiration and, in fact, their very being from Westminster.

My colleagues and I feared that fighting in the Middle East would spread if something were not done and done quickly.

We made suggestions in the United Nations with the dual aim of stopping hostilities in the Middle East and restoring Commonwealth and Anglo-American solidarity.

Faured Spread

My colleague, Canada's Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr. Pearson, took personal charge of the delicate negotiations in those critical hours; his efforts and real achievements won for him the praise and gratitude of the free world, including the British and French peoples.

Our first thought was to press for the setting up of the United Nations Emergency Force. A Canadian soldier, Major-General Burns, was then chosen by the United Nations to command this force, and Canada, to make the force effective, offered to send ships, planes and men.

This idea of a world police force is not new. Canada had several times discussed the possibility of setting up such a force under the United Nations, to be available when crises such as this arose.

And Canada had already contributed to supervisory commissions or international forces to serve the cause of peace in Korea, Kashmir and Indo-China.

Today, fighting has ceased in the Middle East, and though peace is still precarious, it does provide an opportunity to try to work out more permanent solutions to the difficult problems that exploded in open warfare. The United Nations Emergency Force is a very positive achievement for the United Nations. It shows what the UN can do when it really gets the support we feel it should get.

Since I spoke in Victoria, nearly four years ago, there have been far-reaching developments in the world:

1.—We have seen the Soviet Union espouse the concept of competitive co-existence—or at least pay lip service to it;

2.—We have seen people the world over uniting in their desire to develop nuclear energy for peaceful purposes;

3.—We have seen the conscience of the free world stirred to meet the challenge of aiding the economically underdeveloped countries to care more adequately for their citizens.

4.—We have seen solid, practical progress towards welding the countries of Western Europe together.

Less Bellicose

Since the death of Stalin, who has taken his well-deserved place among the tyrants of history, the Soviet Union appears to have adopted a less bellicose attitude towards the West. This change is brought about, probably, because things have not been going too well with the Soviet satellite system.

But competitive co-existence we should realize, does not have quite the same meaning for the Soviet leaders as it does for us. For them it appears to mean that as long as it does not suit them to risk open war, they will stop their attempts to dominate the world somewhat short of actual open conflict.

The cruel suppression by Soviet arms of the popular outbreak in East Berlin and the shameful and brutal way in which they crushed the popular uprising of the freedom-fighters in Hungary—such ruthless and inhuman acts are overwhelming proof that the Soviet Union is not prepared to allow either at home or in its satellite system, any more freedom than it can help.

But there is another reason why the Soviet leaders hesitate to pursue their expansionist dreams. Their scientists have been testing some of these terrible modern weapons of warfare. I think they, too, have now become convinced of the brutal fact, of which we are so deeply conscious, that a major war, in this thermo-nuclear age, would lead to widespread destruction on both sides, and—quite possibly—to mutual self-annihilation. I have a feeling that the Soviet leaders now realize that any armed aggression by them would inevitably result in retaliation which would cause just as much damage to themselves, as they could inflict on others.

Uncomfortable

This sort of co-existence is pretty uncomfortable but it has led to some reduction in international tensions.

During the last four years, Austria and Western Germany have regained their independence. An armistice has been concluded in Korea, and the great task of reconstruction in Southern Korea has begun. Fighting has ended in Indo-China, and Canadians are serving on the supervisory commissions in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia in an attempt to help prevent it from starting up again.

Difficult as this task is for our servicemen and our External Affairs officers, it is in keeping with our view that Canada must accept her responsibility in world affairs.

The shift in emphasis of Soviet policy in no way reduces the need to maintain a strong collective defence. The goal of Communism is still world domination.

The western nations must not allow themselves, because of their deep desire for peace and their eagerness to turn their full attention to domestic matters, to be lulled into a false sense of security. This could lead to a decrease in military preparedness and a lessening of the cohesion and unity of the free world.

We must maintain our defences through the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Canada's important part in maintaining the military strength of the free world has been for the past three years in the very capable hands of a distinguished British Columbian, the Hon. Ralph Campney.

I have known Mr. Campney for quite a few years and his record of service to Canada began long before I had the privilege of meeting him.

As a matter of fact, Ralph Campney, among his other positions in the public service, was at one time a valued aide of my predecessor, Mackenzie King.

During the Korean crisis we asked Ralph Campney to assist the minister of defence, the Hon. Brooke Claxton, with the gigantic task of directing Canada's greatly expanded defence program. And in 1954, when Mr. Claxton retired from the cabinet, we were pleased to have a man of Mr. Campney's ability and experience to take over the defence portfolio.

Splendid Job

I am very pleased to have this opportunity to tell his fellow British Columbians what a splendid job Ralph Campney has been doing as minister of defence, and how much we are relying on his constituents to send him back to Ottawa to carry on his important work for Canada and his fellow-citizens.

I mentioned the increased interest in the peaceful uses of atomic energy. Canada has become a leader in this field, both as a uranium producer and because of our research and development program in which we are spending $18 millions a year to adapt atomic energy to peaceful purposes.

You may recall that the United Kingdom plans to build 12 atomic energy power-plants in the near future. And we in the government want to make sure that Canadians, and indeed all mankind, benefit as soon as possible from this great scientific achievement of unlocking the enormous energy imprisoned in the minute mass of the atom.

Canada was represented in the conference of atomic scientists in Geneva two years ago that led to the establishment of the International Atomic Energy Agency, designed to assist countries to acquire and use this new source of energy for peaceful purposes.

Canada has also been active

at the United Nations in studying the effects of atomic radiation and in finding some way of reducing the hazards of that radiation.

In this era of change and progress, one trend gives me very deep satisfaction. And that is the very genuine desire of those peoples who have enjoyed the benefits of economic development in their own countries to assist the peoples of Asia and Africa to raise their living standards in similar ways.

Three years ago I had an opportunity to visit some of the countries of Asia and talk to their leaders. Incidentally, I was deeply moved on many occasions during that trip to see in what high esteem a representative of Canada is held in other parts of the world.

I found during my trip a tremendous surge of national feeling in all the countries of Asia that I visited. Now a feeling of proud nationalism can be a good thing, as I believe it is generally a good thing in Canada. But in Asia it sometimes takes an anti-western form, which is a left-over from the colonial era.

We have a magnificent opportunity, a magnificent challenge, to help these Asian peoples to attain their legitimate national aspirations without letting these nationalisms decrease the unity of the free world. We must, and I emphasize the word "must", demonstrate our understanding and our friendship by assisting them to develop their resources and better their social conditions.

The Commonwealth nations took the initiative in this humanitarian work in setting up the Colombo Plan. Canada is contributing over $34 millions a year through this plan to assist India, Pakistan, Ceylon and other Asian nations to solve their huge development problems.

We have also been assisting in this important humanitarian work through the United Nations Technical Assistance Program, such as the Food and Agriculture Organization, the International Labor Organization and the World Health Organization.

Progress Made

There is another important area where progress has been made in the past four years. The nations of Western Europe have made a real effort to rise above the narrow nationalism which has led to so much strife and suffering in the past, and to work together to find solutions to their economic, social and political problems.

In all these matters, Great Britain has played an important role.

Canada has welcomed, and where possible we have supported, these developments. In advancing the cause of peace and human well-being, Canada has participated actively in the work of the Commonwealth, the United Nations, and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The Commonwealth is a unique association in human history. It is based not so much on legal documents and contracts as on common ideals, common heritage and common traditions.

Mutual Respect

The effectiveness of the Commonwealth is the result of willing co-operation on the part of all members, candid and continuous exchanges of views in a friendly atmosphere of self-confidence and mutual respect, and full recognition of the aspirations of all member nations. Above all, perhaps, is the common conviction that this association has a great capacity for good, not only for member nations, but for the entire free world.

In recent years, the Commonwealth has played an extremely valuable role in interpreting the views and policies of the Asian members to the West and of the West to the Asian members. The Commonwealth has done much to strengthen co-operation between these two areas of the world.

The Commonwealth has been effective and durable—and I sincerely trust that it will continue to be both effective and durable—because it has shown itself able to adapt to changing conditions. Its present status in the world is a great tribute to the vision and courage of Commonwealth statesmen.

Just a few weeks ago, a former British colony, the Gold Coast, became a full-fledged and sovereign member of the Commonwealth, with the name of Ghana. I have heard many fine things about the prime minister of that young country and if the people of Canada decide on June 10 that I am to remain as Prime Minister of Canada, I shall have the opportunity, in your name, of meeting and greeting him at the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference in London next month.

In a short time we shall have another Commonwealth nation—the Federation of the West Indies. Canada will have a special interest in this new nation, the closest to our shores and one with whose population we already enjoy close economic ties. I am sure that we can look forward to still closer relations with this sister member of the Commonwealth in the future.

Principal Hope

Another of the cornerstones of Canadian foreign policy is the United Nations which we still consider, despite its admitted limitations, as the principal hope for the preservation of peace in our troubled world.

In recent months doubts have been expressed in some quarters about the effectiveness of the United Nations in finding solutions to international differences. When we hear such doubts expressed we would do well to ask ourselves—what if there were no United Nations today?

If the United Nations did not exist, we probably would lapse into a state of international anarchy in a divided world with the forces of freedom on one side, the forces of reactionary Communism on the other and Africans trying to remain aloof or forming their own alignments. This prospect is too grim for any freedom-loving person to think about with any equanimity.

It is important, however, to remember that the United Nations is not a government or a super-state. It can only recommend and not order a nation to comply with its wishes. The reason why the United Nations did not save Hungary from the brutal repression of Soviet forces last year was that it could not, and not that it would not. The fault lies not with the United Nations but with Communist imperialism, which insolently disregarded the moral opinion of the world.

If there had been armed intervention through the United Nations, the first victims would have been the Hungarians themselves and the rest of the world, more than likely, would have followed the combatants into the abyss of world war.

There are three reasons why the United Nations did accomplish its immediate purpose in the Middle East and thus bring about a cessation of fighting and withdrawal of opposing forces there. It was, I suggest, because the United Kingdom and France are great responsible nations, schooled in the democratic traditions and thus heedful of majority opinions. It was because Israel is aware of the facts of life, which for her means that she must some day reach a mutually acceptable accommodation.

tion with her Arab neighbors if she is ever to know peace. It was because Egyptian leaders are realistic enough to appreciate that the only practical alternative—complete identification and collaboration with Moscow—carries with it too great risks for her national freedom and independence.

Constructive

Because Canadians have no axes to grind, because our own past helps to give us an insight into the feeling of emergent nationalisms, and because our record in international affairs is one of co-operation and sincerity in dealings with our neighbors, Canada is, more and more being looked upon by nations old and young as one with a constructive role to play in the development of peace and progress in the world.

Our own life within Canada has, in large measure, prepared us for this task, and it is a challenge that our own self-preservation makes us accept.

Without harboring any illusions about the role we can play in working for international peace and security, we must determine to do our full part to secure those ends. But we can only do so if we maintain our present reputation for integrity and sincerity, we can only do so if we, ourselves, are united in our determination to play our part as citizens of an adult and responsible nation.

That is perhaps the greatest challenge facing Canada and Canadians today.

In the field of foreign policy, as in other fields, the present government has done its best. And in what they have been able to achieve, under this government's direction, for world peace and world brotherhood, Canadians, I think, can feel a legitimate pride.

PM Spells Out Canada's Role In World Peace

Full House at Royal Theatre
Hears Foreign Policy Outline

Prime Minister St. Laurent was headed for Saskatchewan today on his western Canada campaign tour, after spending 24 hours in Victoria over the weekend.

He spoke on Canada's role in world affairs to a overflow crowd at the Royal Theatre Saturday night, went to church and visited patients at Veterans' Hospital Sunday morning, and went salmon fishing in Brentwood Bay in the afternoon.

The fishing expedition, aboard the luxury yacht Fifer, was unsuccessful but the prime minister promised he'd be back to try again.

Mr. St. Laurent received a respectful but not very enthusiastic hearing Saturday night. There was some scattered heckling.

The free world is looking to Canada more and more to take a constructive part in achieving peace and progress, the prime minister told the audience of 1,500.

"It is a challenge that our own self-preservation must make us accept," he said.

While it would be "a bit presumptuous" for Canada because of its size to take the lead in world affairs, "at times we can bring good sense and goodwill to bear to help solve problems with which nations are struggling."

The prime minister emphasized the need to keep our defences strong and maintain alliances with like-minded nations.

'Inevitable Retaliation'

He warned the Soviet Union that any armed aggression would be met with "inevitable and immediate retaliation."

At the same time, Mr. St. Laurent spoke of the horror of atomic warfare which could result in "mutual annihilation."

Canada is spending $18,000,000 a year to adapt atomic energy to peaceful purposes, "the only purpose for which that terrible energy should ever be used by anyone in a civilized world."

Stressing the value of "continuity of government" in the field of foreign relations, the prime minister said Canada could be proud of its achievements toward world peace under direction of the present Liberal government.

One of the most persistent interrupters was a woman in a

SNOW, COLD HURT CROPS IN EUROPE

LONDON (AP)—A freak cold snap gripped Europe today.

There was heavy damage to crops in Britain, France and Italy. Snow lay 10 inches deep in places in Yugoslavia while in the rich Po Valley in Italy, hail destroyed 80 per cent of crops.

PUBLIC POWER FOR COLUMBIA?

Premier Upset Because PM Didn't Call

A broad hint that British Columbia is ready to pick up the federal government's offer of financial aid in developing the huge power resources of the Columbia River on some basis or another came from the Social Credit leaders today.

Following Prime Minister St. Laurent's specific outline of the federal offer last week, both Premier Bennett and national Social Credit leader Solon E. Low commented on the project.

While Premier Bennett did not make a direct announcement that the Columbia would be a public power scheme—a contingency of the federal offer—he did say B.C. is prepared to accept either outright grants from Ottawa, or low-interest long-term loans for development of the hydro.

At the same time he declared if the national government negotiates downstream benefits with the U.S. that B.C. does not like, the provincial government will veto them.

Meantime, at another press conference here, Mr. Low side-stepped the public vs. private power issue, but said he endorsed the federal offer of aid on the project and had always thought there should be "a spirit of partnership" between the two governments on such projects.

Waiting for Official Word

Premier Bennett obviously was annoyed because Prime Minister St. Laurent had not approached him during his Saturday-Sunday visit in Victoria. His position always has been that he knows nothing about the federal government's offer to participate financially in the development beyond reports of a press conference held by Fisheries Minister James Sinclair in Vancouver.

"I have been waiting (since the conference) for a letter which I thought would come from the national government," said the premier.

"When that didn't come, I thought that the prime minister planned to call directly at this office while he was in Victoria. But he made no direct approach when he was here."

"So the situation is that I have had no letter, no representations from the prime minister."

"It had been my hope all along that this offer (that reported by Mr. Sinclair) was not just a political manoeuvre. Now I am very disappointed that I have had no letter, no calls from the prime minister."

The premier, by inference, left the idea that if Ottawa wants to co-operate on the Columbia, the prime minister must come to him.

"If the federal government wants to make substantial grants, they will be acceptable. If the federal government wants to give long-term low-interest loans, under the market price, then this assistance and co-operation will be acceptable."

SURMISE

"Do you mean as a joint venture?" the premier was asked. "You have my statement," said the premier. "You can surmise."

The premier said that in the past of low-interest loans, the B.C. government would guarantee their repayment.

Then, he was asked, do his remarks mean that B.C. is prepared for public development of the Columbia, or does it mean that the government would guarantee loans to a private power corporation?

"We do not guarantee the bonds for private companies," he said.

U.S. SENATE PROBE

Teen-Age Problem Desperate

(UP and AP DISPATCHES)
WASHINGTON — Prostitution, venereal disease, drug addiction and drinking are increasing alarmingly among American teenagers, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee report showed today.

Chairman Thomas C. Hennings, a Missouri Democrat, called for all levels of government "to do something about this blot on the American scene."

The subcommittee said more than one million juveniles between 10 and 17 will be brought before the courts in 1965 if the present upward trend in delinquency continues. This compares with an estimated 530,000 juvenile court cases this year.

The subcommittee issued a special 250-page report on the results of nearly four years of nationwide hearings.

It estimated that at least 200,000 teenagers contract venereal diseases each year.

IF RUSSIA WILL TAKE THEM

B.C. Set to Help Sons Quit Canada

The provincial government will assist the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect to return to Russia if they choose to go, Premier Bennett said today.

"If they decide of their own free will that they want to go, and if Russia will admit them, then we will give them assistance," the premier said.

He was commenting at a press conference on the weekend disclosure that the radical sect, numbering some 2,500 in the East Kootenay district of B.C., has asked permission from the Soviet Union to return to their homeland.

Mr. Bennett made it clear that the B.C. government will not ask the Freedomites to go. "But if they choose to go, we will give them assistance."

BLAMED FOR BLAST

Meanwhile the sect, which has been a source of trouble since their arrival at the turn of the century, was blamed today for a dynamite blast that ripped 120 feet from CPR right-of-way near Nelson Sunday night. The track was undamaged, railway officials said.

Saturday, Nick Kanigan, who lives in a Freedomite settlement near Nelson, confirmed that the radical sect has asked permission to return to the Soviet Union. Kanigan said the request was made two weeks ago to Dmitri Chuvahin, Soviet ambassador at Ottawa. He said he knew of no reply having been received.

The Russian Embassy in Ottawa today declined comment. "I'm sorry, but there is nothing we can say about this at the present time," an embassy spokesman told a Canadian Press reporter.

The spokesman indicated that Mr. Chuvahin has received such a letter but declined to say whether the ambassador has replied.

An immigration department official said the department has received word that the Doukhobors are planning to leave Canada. He said not all the Doukhobors would automatically lose their Canadian citizenship by returning to Russia.

If the Soviet Union gives permission, Kanigan will be one of five Freedomite delegates who will go back to investigate conditions in his homeland.

Kanigan said the Freedomites want to go back to Russia because "it's hard living here in

SPILNER GROUP

Freedomites, a splinter group from the 10,000 Doukhobors who live in B.C., claim that Canadian schools teach militarism. They have refused to send their children to school. But the B.C. government, in a "get tough" policy, detained more than 100 of their children in a special institution at New Denver, 66 miles from Nelson.

Discontented almost since the day they set foot on Canadian soil, the Freedomites have plundered in the nude, burned schools, and blown up railway bridges in protest against what they call persecution by federal and provincial governments.

The Sons of Freedom have a history of attempted moves out of Canada. Most of them have been abortive.

John Lebedoff, secretary of the Freedomites, planned to lead them back to Russia or to Turkey in July, 1949. Nothing came of it.

In 1952, Stefan Sorokin, bearded mystical Freedomite leader, went to Uruguay to look for a new home. He found one, but only for himself. Sorokin still lives in Montevideo.

A consultative committee appointed by the B.C. government in 1950 sent requests to more than a dozen countries asking them if they would take Freedomites. Only Costa Rica replied and the Freedomites said they didn't like Costa Rica.

PRAYER FOR TODAY

O God, bring my life to ever fuller meaning and deeper expression. May I grow in all things, in knowledge, in service, in devotion to Thee. Each day may I get more out of my time, out of my work, out of my Bible. Let me never forget that return is ever in proportion to investment and that those who seek will surely find. Help me to discover the abundant life in Christ. Amen.

FOUR-LEAF CLOVER FOR LUCK

Welcoming Prime Minister St. Laurent at reception given by Alistair Fraser is Guy Moore, 10-year-old son of R. M. Moore, 1960 Beach. Mr. Fraser (centre)

Red Police Quell 3rd Polish Riot

WARSAW (AP)—A major riot was reported today from Jaroslawa, a garrison town in southwest Poland.

More than 1,000 police and troops were called in to quell the disturbance. No date was given for the affair. It apparently occurred just before the weekend.

A report in the Warsaw newspaper Sztandar Mlodych suggested it was one of the most serious of recent outbreaks against Communist state authority. It carried indications of a military mutiny.

These indications were: 1. The arrival in the town of Gen. Kuropieska, a district military commander.

2. Appointment of a military investigation commission to determine responsibility for the trouble.

ARREST DRUNKEN SOLDIER

The papers said the outbreak started with the arrest of a young soldier on a charge of drunkenness. It added that other soldiers and "young hooligans" sided with the arrested man, went to the police station and "started a fuss."

A crowd of several hundred gathered outside the police station and flung stones through the windows.

FOR 10 MINUTES

Boy Trapped Under Boat

DEEP COVE, B.C. (CP)—An 11-year-old boy was trapped for 10 minutes Sunday beneath a capsized 19-foot cabin cruiser as rescuers sought to free him.

David Liversidge was a passenger in the boat which flipped over when struck by the wake of a passing ship.

The boy remained calm until an unidentified man arrived in a small boat and dived under to save him.

Ivan Francis, 24, and Miss Jessie Cooper, who had been thrown free from the boat, were rescued from the cold waters of Burrard Inlet, two miles off shore.

First Road Open To Port Renfrew

For the first time in history, cars and trucks are able to drive from Port Renfrew, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, to connect with the Vancouver Island highway system.

In the last week traffic has been able to move over an access road built by B.C. Forest Products Ltd. from its beach camp at Port Renfrew to its Bear Creek Camp, at the end of the public road extending westward from Shawanigan Lake.

This road is private, and is likely to remain so. Good progress, meanwhile, is being made on the West Coast Road between Jordan River and Port Renfrew, and it is expected it will be completed by the end of August, and open to the public.

The BCFP road actually is not completed, according to company officials. It is quite apart from the 16 miles of logging railroad that join Port Renfrew and Bear Creek Camp, but follows roughly the same route up the San Juan River valley.

Princess Expecting?

LONDON (AP)—The Sunday Dispatch says Princess Grace of Monaco "is believed to be expecting another baby."

A temporary bridge now in use will be replaced later by a permanent structure. According to company officials the whole road is considered "temporary" and will be improved gradually.

It is not one of the roads that must be built under terms of the company's forest management licence, and probably will be used for company business only.

The company has a similar road on the south shore of Cowichan Lake, between Honey-moon Bay and Caycuse, which it considers as private, and for use only by persons either living at Caycuse or having business there.

At present B.C. Forest Products has finished its share of the road, West Coast Road, south of Port Renfrew, and the provincial government is at work on 3.9 miles of road to link with the grade being built by Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber Co. Ltd. of Jordan River. The latter has only 600 feet of road yet to build to finish its obligation. Both companies are building under terms of forest management licences.

Sons of Freedom Douks goin' t' Russia? The'll serve 'em both right.

Controllin' th' Columbia won't be any harder than controllin' th' political emotions that go with it.

Seems grise are too young t' be attracted by campaign bait.

The Declining Years

"I CAN'T do anything with your father," she said. "The doctors told him he must go slow and take things easily. But I just can't stop him. He doesn't seem to realize that we are, none of us, growing any younger, and that he can't expect to do the garden work he used to do."

"Mother," she said, "can't you put shovels or leg irons on him? Hide the garden tools maybe? Or get him to go out with some of his friends and simply forget the garden?"

"It's no good, dear," she said. "He'd be so cross and worried if I treated him that way. He never has liked being bossed or fussed over."

"I did try making him take more time off from the garden, but he says that if he doesn't do it now, there'll be so much more to do later on."

"I've suggested more perennials and cutting down on annuals. But he's so set on his annuals. And nothing will make him change. In his quiet way, he's very stubborn you know!"

"The doctor said that mowing the grass was absolutely out. So we had the Smith boy in for a while. But your father said he didn't mow the grass the way he wanted him to do it. You know how he's always had his own way of doing it, starting by the cherry tree and working towards the long flowerbed? The other day I found him doing it himself. He just sneaked out and did it while I was washing down the shelves in the basement."

Ruth

"I can't do anything with your mother," he said. "The doctors told her she must go slow and take things easily. But you know your mother. She's always done so much. Independent, you know, and full of spirit."

"Dad," she said, "Can't you get really tough with her? Tell her that she simply mustn't do these things. After all, a lot of the jobs she does in the house aren't necessary."

"That's what I keep telling her," he said. "She's much too fussy. Keeps saying the place isn't really clean when as far as I can see it's spotless."

"Take the other day, for instance. I thought she was safely writing letters, so I went to do some work in the garden. Then I found that she was cleaning out the basement, moving cartons of stuff about, and washing down the shelves where the jam jars are."

"It worried me so that I was quite cross with her. Then she was cross with me. And all because I'd been doing just a little bit of mowing near the cherry tree."

Of course, I may have this wrong because most of it is my imagination working overtime. But I feel sure that in this city of retired folk there are plenty of couples like the one I have described.

It's amusing to a point, and yet it is so sad. But I can't help liking it, because the worries and the little irritations so often spring from love.

It's what we promised in the long ago when we vowed that we would love, and cherish, in sickness and in health, till death did us part.

In a way, it's beautiful.

M. J. COLDWELLCCF Leader
Back in Ottawa
For Broadcasts

OTTAWA (CP) — CCF Leader Coldwell, who has been campaigning in Saskatchewan, arrived in the capital by train Sunday.

He plans to remain in Ottawa today and Tuesday for television and radio broadcasts. He speaks at Timmons, Ont., Wednesday.

Mr. Coldwell said he found the situation "very satisfactory" in his Rosetown-Biggar riding and throughout Saskatchewan.

Quiet, Rational Approach
Won Respect for Coldwell

This is the third in a series of articles by the British United Press on the leaders of Canada's chief political parties. The final article, on Social Credit's Bolton, will appear on Tuesday.

OTTAWA (BUP) — M. J. Coldwell, national leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation party, will conduct the least energetic campaign of the four national political leaders due to a mild heart attack he suffered last February.

The 69-year-old CCF leader will limit his campaign to personal appearances in only six major cities and will speak on about half a dozen national radio and television broadcasts. He also will campaign in his home riding of Rosetown-Biggar, Sask.

Coldwell came to Canada as an immigrant at the age of 21 because he thought Devonshire, England, was too conservative and hidebound by tradition. He had attended Exeter University College, and there he had picked up the left-wing political thinking of the Fabian Society and the young Labor Party of the United Kingdom.

He wanted to establish a life for himself in a country which would provide the opportunity for exercising his socialist thinking and, on the advice of a newspaper editor, he came to Canada.

Two years after his arrival in Canada in 1910, he went back to England and married Norah Dunsford, the daughter of the editor who had advised him to come to Canada. She died during Coldwell's 1953 general election campaign.

SCHOOL TEACHER
Coldwell taught school in Alberta and Saskatchewan

when he first came to Canada, and entered politics in 1921 with no real expectation of being elected. He ran for the office of alderman in Regina at the request of a group of working-class people who wanted to press for local improvements in their part of the city. Coldwell thought that by running, he might draw attention to their needs. Surprising himself, he ran second in the slate of five aldermen elected.

Since then, Coldwell has moved steadily upwards in politics. He served 10 years on the Regina city council, during which time he became leader of the Farmer-Labor party in Saskatchewan. When that party grew into the CCF, Coldwell ran for the federal parliament, and in his second try, in 1935, was elected. He has been defeated since.

GOOD SPEAKER
M. J. — as he is generally known in Ottawa, the initials standing for the Christian names Major James — became house leader of the CCF group in 1940, and succeeded to the national leadership of the party two years later when the CCF's founder, J. S. Woodsworth, died.

Coldwell's clarity of thought and forthright manner of speaking have made him one of the best public speakers in the federal parliament. His soft-spoken, rational approach to national business in the Commons has won him respect from his Commons colleagues.

He has taken a keen interest in recent years in international affairs. He is a member of the United Nations Society of Canada and of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. He was one of the parliamentary delegates of the United Nations founding conference in San Francisco, and has attended several sessions of the General Assembly.

LONDON LETTER

Funniest Film

LONDON—Things I didn't know until now . . .

(1) I always thought that the currency of any country was always legal tender within that country. But that doesn't apply to Britain. The popularity of people to use it has brought out the information that it is not legal tender for anything valued at less than five pounds.

Only when proffered in payment of something worth five pounds or over are shopkeepers, etc., legally bound to accept it. Reason: they'd get rid of all their small change otherwise.

(2) Those whose job it is to safeguard the citizens of London regard as the most serious type of road accident one in which a gasoline truck is involved. When that happens, police, fire brigades, ambulance, etc., throughout London are alerted.

Reason: gasoline from a truck in an accident in Hampstead may get into the city's drains and someone in Chelsea may throw a lighted cigarette into the street drains and WOOMP!

(3) When Bernie Braden was brought onto the BBC's staid Brains Trust program as MC the producer defended this move by announcing: "Most of the British public regard Braden as a comic, married to a panel girl, but both he and Barbara came to this country as primarily—Bernie as a Shakespearean actor."

Reyrburn

TOOK young Mae and Robin to see the new British film comedy Brothers in Law, touted here as "a riot," "brilliantly funny," etc. We sat unmoved through the laborious length of this movie about English barristers but our afternoon was saved by the fact that on the same bill was that 1953 French comedy, Monsieur Hulot's Holiday. Although this film is shown and reshowed regularly around London, this was my first view of it.

The three of us emerged from the cinema red-eyed and with pains in the stomach from laughter. Don't know what sort of a showing M. Hulot has had in Canada but if you notice it on anywhere RUSH to see it. I don't think there's any argument that it is the funniest film ever made, not barring the Chaplin classics.

OLD RESIDENTS of St. John's Wood cling to the days when this was a very select part of London. Yesterday I passed a far from select tearoom on our local High Street called Charlie's Cafe. Noticed a sign-writer at work above the entrance and learned from him that a petition from residents had forced Charlie to change the name of his eating place. New name: Charles' Cafe.

HOW TO give the impression of being a great world traveler without going anywhere: in a Shaftesbury Avenue shop you can buy suitcase labels of the poshest continental and American hotels at 50 cents a dozen.

NEW GAME among the Mayfair set is called Subtitles. Samples: Moby Dick—or See You Later Amputator, Romeo and Juliet—or Someone Up There Likes Me, Henry VIII—or The King and I and I and I and I and I.

FALSE TEETH

Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Hold false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug counter.

Here's How to Get Better Daffodils

The lovely warmth of the past few days has meant the sudden end to even the longest lasting of the daffodils. Only those in partial shade are still presentable.

To be sure that we have as good or better bloom from the same bulbs next year there are a few things to be done right now.

The first is to remove every old blossom head which remains. Nip the stem just behind the seed pod which in most cases has already thickened. The object is to prevent the energy of the bulbs from being expended in the production of seed.

Feeding of the bulbs at this time is an additional way to ensure fine bloom next year.

If your particular soil is light and sandy, it may already be dry to the depth of a couple of inches. Water with the hose nozzle around the base of the plants (not on the leaves) before applying a dry fertilizer. One teaspoon to a large bulb, or a tablespoon to a foot a row will be about right. Water again afterwards, since the fertilizer must be made available in liquid form to the bulb rootlets.

GROW LARGER

This is the period during which the bulbs grow larger, and the actual flowers for next year are formed within the bulbs.

Continue to cultivate lightly around the bulbs, and water once more if the soil shows signs of becoming dry.

Once the leaves commence the yellowing process, no further watering is required. The bulbs may then be dug for summer storage while the drying leaves are still attached to act as guides to them.

Neglect after flowering is the reason why so many good quality bulbs give poor value in their second and subsequent years.

Top industrial stock was Union Gas, up 6 1/2 points at 86.

Selected issues posted gains in an otherwise mixed market at New York today. Gains and losses of from fractions to around a point were the general rule for key stocks. Ralls showed a firmer tone than usual. Steels were mixed.

Losses among lower-priced issues were in the 10-15 cent range. Noranda was up one at 52 1/2.

Losses about balanced gains among western oils. Pacific Petroleum fell 1/2 at 23 1/2.

AT NEW YORK Aluminum Ltd. paced upside Canadian issues with a gain of 1 1/2. Other gainers included Distillers-Seagrams 1/2 and Canadian Pacific 1/2. McIntyre slipped 1 and Hudson Bay lost 1/2.

Among Canadian issues on the American exchange, Shawinigan added 1/2. Preston East Dome was ahead 1/2 and Fargo Oil 1/2. Lower were Sapporo Petroleum, Scurry-Rainbow Oil and Richmond Petroleum, all off 1/2.

AT MONTREAL the stock exchange today showed an irregular mixed trend in moderate industrial dealings.

Algonia was high in steels, jumping a point to 136.

AT LONDON the stock market opened the week on a firm note today with sentiment aided by forecasts of a reduction in the bank rate.

Many leading industrialists went ahead. Hudson's Bay was prominent and shares of other companies trading overseas were in demand.

Oil shares were irregular with Shell Transport a firm spot but Canadian Eagles were dull. Dollar shares were firm.

AT VANCOUVER a dull market saw little change in prices. Vantor moved 14,300 between $2.45 and $2.50. Pacific Nickel traded 3,500 up to $1.17. Cowichan Copper sold 3,000 at $1.35.

Wheat was irregular in thin trade. Week-end export wheat loadings totalled 1,470,000 bushels, including: United Kingdom 825,000, France 370,000, Belgium 100,000 and Poland 175,000.

Lakehead prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat were unchanged from Friday.

Wheat dipped almost a cent on some new and old crop contracts after starting fractionally higher. Corn lost more than a cent at times on the December and March contracts.

Selling in wheat was influenced by clearing weather in the rain-soaked southwest and the shipment of 53 cars of red winter wheat out of Chicago during the weekend.

CHICAGO (AP)—The grain futures market turned lower today after getting off to a firm start.

ORGANIZED CONFUSION REIGNED at Memorial Arena early today as Jaycee workers, concessionaires, exhibitors prepared for opening of annual Victoria

Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition at 6 p.m. for week's run. Sponsors hope more than 90,000 will view exhibits, enjoy entertainment. (Times Photo.)

Fair Days Hit Victoria

A ferocious 400-pound alligator has been brought from the United States for exhibition at the week-long annual Industrial and Agricultural Fair to open at the Memorial Arena and Victoria Curling Rink at 6 tonight.

Officials of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the fair, said the alligator, named "Joe," was brought here as a special attraction for children. He's a man-eating alligator, they said, similar to "Wallace" the lion who ate up "little Albert."

In addition, Jaycee officials said the midway will feature a group of monkeys which have been trained to ride small cars. Others attractions will be an exhibition of tropical fish.

The exhibition, the largest ever held in Victoria, will be opened officially by Public Works Minister W. N. Chant, Mayor Percy Scourrah and Deputy Minister of Agriculture William MacGillivray at 7.30 on the arena stage.

A parade of May Queen contestants, eight in number, will be held on the stage at 8.30 p.m. Winner, chosen by popular ballot, will be named Saturday on the closing night of the fair.

The fair will be opened every day until Saturday from 2 p.m. until 11 p.m.

On Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., children will be admitted free.

Carey Demands Argyle's Resignation

Esquimalt Hears Report Tonight

Resignation of Councillor George Argyle as chairman of the public works committee will be demanded tonight at a meeting of Esquimalt Council.

Coun. J. E. Carey said today he will press for the resignation regardless of a solicitor's report on the legality of renting equipment from a firm in which one councillor is a director.

Coun. Argyle is director of Esquimalt Service Ltd., which rented a street-cleaner to the municipality in March and followed it up with a $612 bill for services at the last council meeting, Carey charged.

The machine was rented "without council authorization," Coun. Carey said.

He led demands for the report which will be heard tonight. "I don't care what the solicitor says," Coun. Carey said. "If a councillor sits on a committee as chairman he has an open opportunity to push the business of his own firm and that isn't right. It means that any person who wants to compete for a contract just hasn't got a chance."

Coun. Carey said he would also attempt to bar Coun. Argyle from membership in the three-man committee "so that he wouldn't be allowed to vote on municipal dealings when he's representing his own firm."

Wage Protest Province Wide

Forty-six local branches of the B.C. Government Employees' Association are meeting throughout the province this week to protest the government's refusal to give them wage increases.

Some 300 members from all parts of Vancouver Island will hold a protest meeting at Nanaimo next Friday at 8 p.m. All Victoria members wishing to attend will be given free bus transportation.

"Provincial government employees are irritated because MLAs and the cabinet voted themselves more money this year although the cabinet refused to give raises to government employees," H. A. Carney, secretary of the Victoria branch, said today.

"There is considerable unrest throughout the province on this issue."

MEETING TONIGHT

The mass protest kicks off tonight with a meeting of 1,000 employees in Vancouver. The meeting is at 8 p.m. in the Pender Auditorium, 339 West Pender.

"It is the first mass meeting the association has ever called here," said E. I. Fox, executive secretary of the Vancouver-New Westminster branch.

Leading the Victoria delegation are executives Larry G. Huck, Miss Joan Gower, H. Gordon Moore and H. A. Carney.

'For God's Sake, Betty, Shut Up'

The Appeal Court adjourned early this afternoon to allow time for a doctor's examination of Colin Chalmers, who is appealing a 20-year sentence for bank holdup.

A Victoria bank robber burst into tears in B.C. Appeal Court today and cried out to his sister in the witness box:

"For God's sake, Betty, shut up!"

Colin W. L. Chalmers, 24, broke down and sobbed hysterically while his sister, Mrs. Betty Coleman, 3450 Doncaster Drive, told of his shock and grief when his father was burned to death in a nursing home fire in 1950.

Devoted to Father

"My brother was devoted to his father," Mrs. Coleman said, "and the horror of his death has lived with him night and day ever since."

Judges and counsel obviously were moved as Mrs. Coleman told of her brother's difficult family background, and of how he had broken into a Victoria bank to get money because his mother was in financial difficulties.

Chalmers was brought from Oakalla penitentiary to appeal a sentence of 20 years he received in the B.C. Assize Court March 28 for armed robbery of the James Bay branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce on Feb. 11.

He was found guilty of stealing $3,640 at gunpoint from teller Peter Margets.

Passionate Plea

Chalmers appeared in court between two burly Mounties. He refused legal aid and addressed a passionate plea in his defence to Mr. Justice Sidney Smith, Mr. Justice H. I. Bird and Mr. Justice Davey, who heard the appeal.

Besides his sister, he called numerous friends who testified to his "generosity and helpfulness" and his "acutely sensitive nature" which "drove him to desperation" when his family were in difficulties.

Mrs. Coleman said after their father's death Colin told her he wished he could die, too, and be able to "go where Dad has gone."

Chalmers burst into tears and told her to stop.

In Choir

The bank robber continued sobbing heavily while Mrs. Coleman gave evidence. She told how he had sung in a church choir, belonged to a Sunday school and "believed what he was taught," and of his service in the Canadian Air Cadets.

"He was always deeply sensitive and easily hurt," she said. "At school he suffered from acne and when other children teased him he played truant."

Frustrated

"He was frustrated all his life and he built up a wall of resentment . . . He was confused and frustrated and he struck back at life in the only way he knew."

Chalmers again broke down when Mr. Justice Sidney Smith invited him to address the bench.

"You must take hold of yourself," the judge said. "Keep calm and tell us what you have to say."

"I committed this crime on an impulse—without intending to harm anyone," he continued.

TOWER SINGING...

Unique Ceremony Planned At Christ Church Cathedral

Choir of men and boys will sing from the towers of Christ Church Cathedral early Thursday, May 30, in a unique—Victoria—ceremony marking Ascension Day.

Singing from the towers—highest point in a cathedral—is a tradition in some parts of Europe on Ascension Day, Dean Brian Whitlow said.

PRICE OF PROGRESS TO CITY: $30,000 MORE FOR GARBAGE

Changing methods of home heating have resulted in a $30,000 increase in Victoria's garbage collection costs, according to estimates presented to city council today.

City engineer, James C. Garnett, said new uses for waste sawmill products have resulted in: Less firewood; more use of coal, meaning more ash; more use of fuel oil, meaning less garbage burned in homes, more for city disposal.

Result: $254,242 need this year as against $224,953 in 1956.

Council Slices Budget by 1 Mill

New Public Works Program, Maintenance Cut $95,000

By PETE LOUDON
Victoria's 1957 public works program suffered a $95,000 setback today when aldermen completed thinning out the departmental estimates.

BUDGET NOTES

Question of whether city workmen rest on their shovels was discussed by city council while considering public works estimates today.

"Has the city recently fired anyone for sleeping on the job?" Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow wanted to know.

He said he had been called by a businessman in this regard. "I investigated that. It was absolute nonsense," said city engineer J. C. Garnett. He said one man was recently fired for inebriation.

A wage hike won by B.C. Commissioners last week has been passed along in part to the city, which employs members as a meter patrol.

Where the city paid $1,162.50 a month previously, the rate will now be $1,365 for five men and a sergeant. Council added $1,708 to the provisional budget to cover the added cost for part of 1957.

Victorian Order of Nurses asked city for $7,500 this year instead of the $6,500 they received from the city each year for the last eight. It was pointed out by comptroller Dennis A. Young the services provided by the VON relieved the city welfare department of considerable expense. Council met the VON halfway—chopped $500 from the estimate—okayed $500 more than previously.

Development of small parks in Victoria was curtailed slightly when aldermen chopped a $44,090 estimate by $2,000.

Public works chairman, Ald. M. H. Mooney also argued against cutting maintenance programs.

"Are you willing to take the responsibility for a millrate increase?" the mayor asked him sharply.

"I am if it's for the good of the people. We have lots of frills—(he mentioned parks)—we could cut, but services should come first."

Also dropped were proposed repairs to Johnson Street bridge decking ($7,000), Dallas Road seawall repairs ($15,535), city share of local improvements ($2,000), maintenance to city yard buildings ($1,000), surveys ($800).

Nanaimo Man In Hospital Here After Assault

A Nanaimo Good Samaritan who was assaulted by three men he tried to help, is in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today, suffering from a fractured skull.

William L. Leakey Saturday offered to help three men whose car nearly overturned outside his home. Two of them attacked him and beat him with an iron pipe or a stone, then fled in the car, an eyewitness told police.

Mr. Leakey was transferred here from Nanaimo hospital.

MONTE ROBERTS

So alright, so you're sunburned.
So your back is aflame and your forehead is scorched and your nose is making like a burlesque strip teaser.
So suddenly there is a law saying you have to get two months' tan in one afternoon?
Don't come to ME with your troubles, OUCH!

But this being Monday morning, let us discuss a cheerful subject.
Let us discuss laughter.

I have in mind some correspondence appearing in the columns of the Winnipeg Tribune, these being letters to the editor from various citizens who are worried because Winnipeg people don't smile enough.

And, according to the letter writers, laugh hardly at all. As a former resident of Winnipeg, I could think of several reasons for this lack of levity, none of which I will mention at this moment.

There are too many other former residents of Winnipeg here.

There is no fury like that of a former resident of Winnipeg when his home town is scorned.

So, instead, I will take the positive approach, and extend high commendation to one Winnipeg letter-writer who signs himself "K.R."

Says he:

"For several years now I have thought Winnipeggers don't smile enough, and have tried to do something about it. My first discovery is that most people forget how to laugh . . . they forget because their laughter impulses become insensitive from lack of use . . . I am speaking of adults."

"To prove the truth of my assertion I ask every adult who reads these words to stop and recall when they last laughed aloud. . . ."

"Don't let us have the excuse that we find nothing to laugh at these days. . . ."

"For those who have forgotten how to laugh I have this advice. Learn again. Practice laughter with each other. Don't be embarrassed or nervous or afraid to look foolish. Have a good BIG laugh."

"At first the imitation may sound false. But the true laughter will come and it will lift you up and give life new meaning."

Bless you, K.R., and I agree with every word.

For instance, that sunburn you acquired yesterday, makes you look real funny, doesn't it? Ha, ha, OH, ha, ha, HA.

OUCH!

Coalition Idea Denied By Solon Low

National Social Credit Leader Solon Low said here today his party would never enter a coalition with the Conservatives regardless of the outcome of the June 10 federal election.

Mr. Low said at a press conference that Social Credit would consider "co-operating" with either the Conservatives or Liberals if either were elected as a minority government.

"It would be our duty to help maintain stability in the country until another election could be called," he said.

Mr. Low said there was "no justification" for the coalition report made in a Vancouver newspaper Saturday after a press conference in the mainland city.

"We certainly wouldn't coalesce or amalgamate," he said.

Pressed by reporters for a prediction of the outcome of the election, the Social Credit leader said there was an "outside possibility" of a minority government being elected.

BALANCE OF POWER

Social Credit hopes to win the balance of power June 10.

Mr. Low said he would be "very disappointed" if the party didn't win at least 15 of B.C.'s 22 federal seats. (Social Credit had four in the last Commons.)

Social Credit has a "good chance" of making gains in Alberta and will take some in the East but the exact number is "hard to predict."

"We're thinking we can take a fair over-all vote in Ontario," he said.

Mr. Low repeated his party's claim that the press had "deliberately played down" reports of the Social Credit rally in Toronto's Massey Hall last month.

SHOPPING GUIDE

By PENNY SAVER

What next? We are a pampered lot, you know! Not only do we have daintily tinted hot water bottles, but now we have perfumed ones. Really... they come in rose, jasmine and violet fragrance and shade. They have a turn-over top that ensures that no water will leak out. English-made, the bottles are selling at $1.89. The light fragrance of the rubber is a pleasant change from the rather musty smell that rubber usually has.

Gloves that have been taking a beating all winter, aren't likely to be very fresh-looking and smart for summer, so be prepared to stock up on dainty, lightweight gloves to carry you through the warm months. I have seen in town a wonderful sale of sheer nylon gloves that have light embroidery on the backs or at the short cuffs. Some are shirred, featuring above-the-wrist length, while others just meet the cuff of your jacket or dress. Choose from white, black, navy or pastels to complement your sun-time outfits. The price is very low... 89 cents a pair.

We discovered in our house that our collection of long-playing records was getting a little out of hand and finding a particular record took some time. Of course, the answer was a metal record rack that holds the records upright, easily removed, easily put back. You can buy black wrought iron racks with an over-the-top handle. This rack will hold a sizeable collection and is priced at $6.96. If you find that albums need a resting place, too, you may buy another style rack that has a shelf above the record rack. Now all your records are in one place, the albums neatly stacked on the shelf and the single cartoned records in the metal slots. Your collection will receive better care and keeping it all in one place will be no chore at all. This larger rack costs $9.95.

Roaming into a jewelry store, I noticed some very dainty pearl stud earrings for pierced ears. Set in sterling silver are tiny pearls that every woman loves. The earrings are French and cost $1.95.

I would like to serve a buffet lunch. Would it be proper to have the invitations written this way? How soon should I mail them?

Answers:
A "family gathering" and an "open house" are quite different. If you are having a family party, why not phone everybody or write notes to invite the relatives? An "open house" or an "at home", which are pretty much the same, involve many people, and if that is what you want, then you would have to mail invitations. You can hardly say that you are serving buffet lunch because of the late afternoon hours. Buffet supper would be a better compromise. The wording for the invitations can go something like this: (top line) Mr. and Mrs. Mathew S. King (second line), Mathew S. King, Junior (third line) "at home" (fourth line) Sunday, the ninth of June, (fifth line) from three until six o'clock, (sixth line) your address. If

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Which Style Swim Suit Will Fit Your Figure?

With swimming days practically upon us it is time to think in terms of swim suits, play clothes and beach wear. There is a most flattering style of bathing suit for every type figure.

For instance, the two-piece suit is unbecoming to the matronly silhouette. In fact it takes a slim figure, and an especially slim waist, to get away with one of these. Not only does the bare midriff expose any rolls you may have, but the contrast in colors between the white strip of skin and the suit makes you look wider. Color contrasts are used to make a very tall slim woman look shorter and fatter.

For this same reason the two-piece suit is flattering to the tall, slim woman, unless her ribs are too prominent. The one-piece suit which fits snugly at the waist and has a full skirt is also good for the tall, slim gal.

The woman who has a few extra pounds should avoid extremes. She looks best in a one-piece suit which has a skirt, but without fullness. Of course dark colors such as black and navy blue are more slenderizing than lighter, brighter ones.

Here are a few more hints to keep you lovely looking during summer fun:

1. If you are self-conscious about a small bust, remember that you now can buy swim suits with built-in falsies.
2. You also can get a waterproof mascara and make-up base.
3. A strip of chamolai placed around your head under your bathing cap, at its edge, will help keep your hair dry.
4. The bathing suit rules apply to play clothes, also.
5. Pedal pushers are much more flattering to the mature woman than very short shorts.

If you still have a few extra pounds and you missed my

U.S. Senate
Set to Probe
Teen Problem

(UP and AP DISPATCHES)
WASHINGTON — Prostitution, venereal disease, drug addiction and drinking are increasing alarmingly among American teenagers, a Senate judiciary subcommittee report showed today.

Chairman Thomas C. Hennings, a Missouri Democrat, called for all levels of government "to do something about this blot on the American scene."

The subcommittee said more than one million juveniles between 10 and 17 will be brought before the courts in 1965 if the present upward trend in delinquency continues. This compares with an estimated 530,000 juvenile court cases this year.

The subcommittee issued a special 250-page report on the results of nearly four years of nationwide hearings.

It estimated that at least 200,000 teenagers contract venereal diseases each year.

Royal Theatre
Meeting Packed

By PETER MURRAY

Prime Minister St. Laurent was headed for Saskatchewan today on his western Canada campaign tour, after spending 24 hours in Victoria over the weekend.

He spoke on Canada's role in world affairs to an overflow crowd at the Royal Theatre Saturday night, went to church and visited patients at Veterans' Hospital Sunday morning, and went salmon fishing in Brentwood Bay in the afternoon.

The fishing expedition, aboard the luxury yacht Flier, was unsuccessful but the prime minister promised he'd be back to try again.

Mr. St. Laurent received a respectful but not very enthusiastic hearing Saturday night. There was some scattered heckling.

The free world is looking to Canada more and more to take a constructive part in achieving peace and progress, the prime minister told the audience of 1,500.

"It is a challenge that our own self-preservation must make us accept," he said.

While it would be "a bit presumptuous" for Canada because of its size to take the lead in world affairs, "at times we can bring good sense and goodwill to bear to help solve problems with which nations are struggling."

The prime minister emphasized the need to keep our defenses strong and maintain alliances with like-minded nations.

He warned the Soviet Union that any armed aggression would be met with "inevitable and immediate retaliation."

3rd Polish Riot

WARSAW (AP)—A major riot was reported today from Jaroslav, a garrison town in southwest Poland.

More than 1,000 police and troops were called in to quell the disturbance. No date was given for the affair. It apparently occurred just before the weekend.

A report in the Warsaw news paper Sztandar Mlodych suggested it was one of the most serious of recent outbursts against Communist state authority. It carried indications of a military mutiny.

These indications were:
1. The arrival in the town of Gen. Kuropieska, a district military commander.
2. Appointment of a military investigation commission to determine responsibility for the trouble.

The papers said the outburst started with the arrest of a young soldier on a charge of drunkenness. It added that other soldiers and "young hooligans" sided with the arrested man, went to the police station and "started a fuss." A crowd of several hundred gathered outside the police station and flung stones through the windows.

The paper added: "An appeal

DEEP COVE, B.C. (CP)—An 11-year-old boy was trapped for 10 minutes Sunday beneath a capsized 19-foot cabin cruiser as rescuers sought to free him.

David Liversidge was a passenger in the boat which flipped over when struck by the wake of a passing ship.

The boy remained calm until an unidentified man arrived in a small boat and dived under to save him.

Ivan Francis, 24, and Miss Jessie Cooper, who had been thrown free from the boat, were rescued from the cold waters of Burrard Inlet, two miles off shore.

Bennett Not Specific
On Public Power Issue

A broad hint that British Columbia is ready to pick up the federal government's offer of financial aid in developing the huge power resources of the Columbia River on some basis or another came from the Social Credit leaders today.

Following Prime Minister St. Laurent's specific outline of the federal offer last week, both Premier Bennett and national Social Credit leader Solon E. Low commented on the project.

While Premier Bennett did not make a direct announcement that the Columbia would be a public power scheme—a contingency of the federal offer—he did say B.C. is prepared to accept either outright grants from Ottawa or low-interest long-term loans for development of the hydro.

At the same time he declared if the national government negotiates downstream benefits with the U.S. that B.C. does not like, the provincial government will veto them.

Meantime, at another press conference here, Mr. Low sidestepped the public vs. private power issue, but said he endorsed the federal offer of aid on the project and had always thought there should be "a spirit of partnership" between the two governments on such projects.

Waiting for Official Word

Premier Bennett obviously was annoyed because Prime Minister St. Laurent had not approached him during his Saturday-Sunday visit in Victoria. His position always has been that he knows nothing about the federal government's offer to participate financially in the development beyond reports of a press conference held by Fisheries Minister James Sinclair in Vancouver.

"I have been waiting (since the conference) for a letter which I thought would come from the national government," said the premier.

"When that didn't come, I thought that the prime minister planned to call directly at this office while he was in Victoria. But he made no direct approach when he was here.

"So the situation is that I have had no letter, no representations from the prime minister. "It had been my hope all along that this offer (that reported by Mr. Sinclair) was not just a political manoeuvre. Now I am Continued on Page 2

IF RUSSIA WILL TAKE THEM

B.C. Set to Help
Sons Quit Canada

The provincial government will assist the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect to return to Russia if they choose to go, Premier Bennett said today.

"If they decide of their own free will that they want to go, and if Russia will admit them, then we will give them assistance," the premier said.

He was commenting at a press conference on the week-end disclosure that the radical sect, numbering some 2,500 in the East Kootenay district of B.C., has asked permission from the Soviet Union to return to their homeland.

The Russian Embassy in Ottawa today declined comment.

"I'm sorry, but there is nothing we can say about this at the present time," an embassy spokesman told a Canadian Press reporter.

The spokesman indicated that Mr. Chuvahin has received such a letter but declined to say whether the ambassador has replied.

An immigration department official said the department has received word that the Doukhobors are planning to leave Canada. He said not all the Doukhobors would automatically be granted entry.

FAMILY SWEEP THROUGH PIPE BY FLOOD WATERS

4 Survive Ordeal in Culvert

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—They believe me, your life really does "flash in front of your eyes."

The Tyndales were bound for a Florida vacation when they ran into a cloudburst Friday night south of Nashville, Ga. The sudden downpour forced them to stop the car with about 10 other stalled motorists.

"Suddenly the car moved sideways and we saw water coming in through the floor boards," Tyndale related. "I tried to open the door but the water was nearly to the windows and I couldn't get it open. The car was settling fast. We each grabbed one of the kids and dived head first out the windows."

Clinging to the car, Tyndale had to remove a leg brace he wears as a result of a polio attack five years ago.

"That was the most brutal force I've experienced," said Tyndale, a 31-year-old construction engineer. "We were swept into the culvert, tumbling end over end under water, banging against the side, and then we were sped out the other side. We didn't know if we were alive or dead, or where we were."

very disappointed that I have had no letter, no call from the prime minister.

The premier, by inference, left the idea that if Ottawa wants to co-operate on the Columbia, the prime minister must come to him.

"If the federal government wants to make substantial grants, they will be acceptable. If the federal government wants to give long-term low-interest loans, under the market price, then this assistance and co-operation will be acceptable."

SUMMISE

"Do you mean as a joint venture?" the premier was asked. "You have my statement," said the premier. "You can surmise."

The premier said that in the case of low-interest loans, the B.C. government would guarantee their repayment.

Then, he was asked, do his remarks mean that B.C. is prepared for public development of the Columbia, or does it mean that the government would guarantee loans to a private power corporation?

"We do not guarantee the bonds for private companies," he said.

Premier Bennett said B.C. "is disappointed" by the delays in U.S.-Canada negotiations on the Columbia downstream benefits.

"It is true that they meet on May 15," he said, "but they haven't even agreed on an agenda yet. There have been no real steps, and we don't want any more smoke screens from Ottawa."

When the negotiations finally are undertaken, said the premier, "unless they (Ottawa) protect us, we will veto the negotiations. We will insist that B.C. is entitled to its proper share of downstream benefits."

The fact that negotiations have not gone on, despite the federal election, means, said the premier, Ottawa is "playing politics with the people's resources."

Premier Bennett declared that Victoria has made representations to Ottawa suggesting, generally, dominion-provincial resources development.

"Ottawa's co-operation has been very slim to date."

Timing of the federal offer just before the election and the manner in which it was made by Fisheries Minister James Sinclair at a press conference, were also criticized by Mr. Low.

"But we sincerely hope that what the prime minister and his water boy (Mr. Sinclair) have said will be made a fact," the national leader said.

"It is worthy of consideration and if any restrictions that may be tied to the offer can be made acceptable to Mr. Bennett for the benefit of the province, we would rejoice."

Asked for a general policy statement on public-versus-private power, Mr. Low replied:

"Generally we stand for private enterprise; we think it's best. But there are times and circumstances when public development is wiser."

He didn't know enough about the Columbia to say whether it was the place for public power.

"I am sure your provincial leaders have the matter well in hand and will be able to reach the right decision," Mr. Low said.

ST. LAURENT

At the same time, Mr. St. Laurent spoke of the horror of atomic warfare which could result in "mutual annihilation."

Canada is spending $18,000,000 a year to adapt atomic energy to peaceful purposes.

"The only purpose for which that terrible energy should ever be used by anyone in a civilized world."

Stressing the value of "continuity of government" in the field of foreign relations, the prime minister said Canada could be proud of its achievements toward world peace under direction of the present Liberal government.

One of the most persistent interrupters was a woman in a blue hat who repeatedly asked: "Why did you vote with Russia against England over Suez?"

The prime minister ignored the question but said it was "a tragic moment" for the free world when Britain and America divided over the Suez issue.

Canada believed the fighting would spread if not stopped immediately, and the federal government had suggested steps in the United Nations with the dual aim of stopping hostilities and restoring Commonwealth and Anglo-American solidarity.

SOME BOOING
There was some booing in the theatre when he added: "You have only to read the British and French newspapers to see how much these efforts were appreciated."

Before the theatre rally, Mr. St. Laurent attended a reception in the Empress Hotel given by Alistair Fraser, Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich.

Crowds packed the lower ballroom as the prime minister moved around the room shaking hands with everyone who came in his path.

He arrived 30 minutes late after taking an hour's nap, following the long day's journey from Vancouver to Nanaimo and down Vancouver Island by car.

Mr. St. Laurent arrived at the theatre at 8 p.m. dressed in a dark blue suit and sporting a red rose in his lapel.

The prime minister said he picked Victoria to speak on international affairs because of the city's historic ties with Britain and position on the Pacific Ocean.

He spoke of Canada's stepped-up trade with Japan, but made no mention of the controversial topic of recognition of Red China.

"It is important to this nation to keep good relations and prevent as many eastern countries as we can from coming under the influence of Communism," Mr. St. Laurent said.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY
"We have a magnificent opportunity, a magnificent challenge, to help these Asian peoples to attain their legitimate national aspirations without letting these nationalisms decrease the unity of the free world."

The importance of Canada's ties with the Commonwealth was stressed by the prime minister.

"This association has a great capacity for good; not only for member nations, but for the entire free world," he said.

Despite its limitations, the UN is the "principal hope for the preservation of peace in our troubled world," Mr. St. Laurent said.

Without it, there would be international anarchy.

Summing up the external policy followed by his government, the prime minister said it has been:

"To work for peace, to work in a friendly fashion, with every other nation that is willing to try with us to root out the causes of war and solve differences between nations by peaceful means."

After Mr. St. Laurent concluded his address, a number of his hearers called for questions.

Forrest L. Shaw, the chairman hesitated and glanced quickly at Mr. St. Laurent, who gave no sign.

Mr. Shaw then invited John D. Johnson, Victoria Social Credit constituency association president, to go up to the stage and ask his question afterwards.

The curtain over the stage started to descend but was quickly checked as a chorus of protests broke out. Mr. Shaw called for the national anthem and a few people hooted and jeered as the orchestra began to play. But everyone stood while the anthem was sung.

LESS TIRED
Mr. St. Laurent looked less tired Sunday than he did after the strenuous itinerary Saturday.

A fleet of small boats circled round and round the yacht, Fifer, in the sunlit bay, and Mr. St. Laurent, standing on deck in grey suit and hat, waved repeatedly as cameramen took his picture.

Mr. St. Laurent, his daughter, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, Defence Minister Ralph Campney and other members of the party sat down to a formal lunch aboard the Fifer before the prime minister went fishing.

Photographers followed him closely hoping the prime minister would land a big one. But his luck was out and only weeds clung to his line when he hauled it in for the last time.

The prime minister and his party flew from Patricia Bay to Vancouver in late afternoon. He boarded a train for Saskatoon in the evening.

Job Picture Brightening In Victoria
First major drop in the number of unemployed persons occurred in Victoria during the past week, and there are now 321 fewer people seeking work, the National Employment Office reported today.

This reduction was fairly evenly divided between men's and women's files, the men's files showing 269 and the women's 252 fewer applications for work.

There were slightly more vacancies for construction and lumber workers. Power line men are in demand for a job out of town.

Conference Urged On Nuclear Ban
VIENNA (AP) — Dr. Adolf Scherf, Austria's vice-chancellor and Socialist candidate for president, last week proposed a conference, headed by Dr. Albert Schweitzer to work for a ban on nuclear weapons. Schweitzer, Nobel Prize winner, musician, medical missionary and theologian, last week issued a statement opposing nuclear weapons test blasts.

The first spark plug ignition-engineered for today's engines and today's driving

HOT AT LOW SPEED
City driving at traffic-jam pace demands a plug hot enough to prevent fouling. The new Auto-Lite Resistor Spark Plug with Power Tip is the answer . . . because the projecting Power Tip gets hot faster, operates hotter to burn away fouling deposits which ruin ordinary spark plugs in city driving.

COLD AT HIGH SPEED
On the open road, higher speeds call for a plug cool enough to prevent pre-ignition. New Auto-Lite Resistor Spark Plug with Power Tip is the answer . . . because the projecting Power Tip is actually cooled by the richer air-fuel mixture to check dangerous high-speed pre-ignition caused by overheated spark plugs.

* Power Tip is ignition-engineered for overhead valve V-8 engines and for most overhead valve 4-cylinder engines in all these cars: Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Chrysler, Oldsmobile, Dodge, Ford, Hudson, Imperial, Lincoln, Mercury, Packard, Plymouth, Pontiac, Rambler, Studebaker.

20 Algerians Hurt In Grenade Blast

CONSTANTINE, Algeria (Reuters)—An 80-year-old woman was killed and 61 persons were taken to hospital Sunday after a grenade exploded in a crowded market place. Twenty persons, 10 of them women, were injured by the grenade. The crowd panicked, and surged down narrow side street. French forces killed 60 insurgents in a series of clashes Saturday.

Mother, Father Die Simultaneously

MILAN (Reuters)—Two women who save their mother-in-law and killed by a motorcycle here searched frantically for their 73-year-old father who had gone out for a walk. They found him lying dead in a street near their home. A doctor said that Giovanni Groci died of heart failure at almost exactly the time his wife, Angela, was killed.

First Road Open To Port Renfrew

For the first time in history, cars and trucks are able to drive from Port Renfrew, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, to connect with the Vancouver Island highway system.

In the last week traffic has been able to move over an access road built by B.C. Forest Products Ltd. from its beach camp at Port Renfrew to its Bear Creek Camp, at the end of the public road extending westward from Shawanigan Lake.

This road is private, and is likely to remain so. Good progress, meanwhile, is being made on the West Coast Road between Jordan River and Port Renfrew, and it is expected it will be completed by the end of August, and open to the public.

The BCFP road actually is not completed, according to company officials. It is quite apart from the 16 miles of logging railroad that join Port Renfrew and Bear Creek Camp, but follows roughly the same route up the San Juan River valley.

A temporary bridge now in use will be replaced later by a permanent structure. According to company officials, the whole road is considered "temporary" and will be improved gradually.

It is not one of the roads that must be built under terms of the company's forest management licence, and probably will be used for company business only.

The company has a similar road on the south shore of Cowichan Lake, between Honey-moon Bay and Caycuse, which it considers as private, and for use only by persons either living at Caycuse or having business there.

At present B.C. Forest Products has finished its share of the road. West Coast Road, south of Port Renfrew, and the provincial government is at work on 3.9 miles of road to link with the grade being built by Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber Co. Ltd. of Jordan River. The latter has only 600 feet of road yet to build to finish its obligation. Both companies are building under terms of forest management licences.

Diefenbaker Invades Quebec
OTTAWA (CP)—With a week of Maritime campaigning behind him, John Diefenbaker today opens an intensive two-day drive for support along the Quebec side of the Ottawa River.

The Progressive Conservative leader had eight stops scheduled, mainly in Pontiac-Temiscamingue riding upriver, in what will likely be his most active day since his tour began April 25.

His main speeches will be at Fort Coulonge, Campbell's Bay and Shawville, in a riding which has not elected a Conservative since 1930. He will campaign Tuesday in Gatineau and Hull, ridings across the river from the capital.

Mr. Diefenbaker ended his Maritime trip Saturday with a whistle-stop swing along New Brunswick's north shore through four constituencies. He ended the day at Campbellton in Restigouche-Madawaska, the only one of the four ridings represented by a Conservative in the last Parliament.

First stop Saturday was at Moncton, in Westmorland, where he said a Conservative government would set up an independent body to adjudicate in disputes between the publicly-owned CBC and private broadcasting stations.

At present the CBC was its own judge in such disputes, a situation which endangered "freedom of the individual to think and to hear."

He referred to Prime Minister St. Laurent's letter of protest to the CBC last fall about a radio commentary by a professor at Winnipeg.

This was undeniable evidence that the government "having stultified Parliament may move further ahead, unless stopped, to dry up the wells of free information to which Canadians are entitled."

He added: "The instruments for the public dissemination of information must be freed from the danger of becoming propaganda agencies of the government in power."

Mr. Diefenbaker spoke to some 650 persons in a Moncton theatre where the local party organization bought out the matinee show for the occasion, and later let children in for a free movie. Running competition was a Liberal nomination convention in nearby high school attended by an estimated 450.

The Conservative leader spoke to about 625 at Campbellton in the evening in another movie theatre. He followed nearly two hours of preliminary speech-making and held his own ad-

School Concert At Royal Oak 'Outstanding'

A spring concert at Royal Oak High School Friday proved an outstanding success.

The evening included a variety of musical and novelty numbers, including a one-act play.

Three vocal groups performed: the girls of grade eight, the Glee Club and a trio of grade 12 girls, consisting of Marion Liddiard, Jean Barlow and Jean Ross.

Soloists Jean Barlow and Jim Cathro drew audience applause. Bob Cuthbert led a group of boys imitating Elvis Presley, while a group of girls in pantomime, called the "Hep Cats," lived up to their name in performance.

Joy Anderton was excellent as pianist, while a display of tumbling was eye-catching.

Linda Chipping and Judy Adrian presented the "Charleston," while the play, "Our Dream House," brought a bevy of unexpected talent to viewers. Players were Judy Noonan, Frank Gibbons, Linda Swayne, Billy Hillier, Susan Batterbury, Peggy McShane and Chris Searle.

One of the highlights of the evening was a brother-sister clarinet and trumpet duet by Susan and Adrian Batterbury.

'Canada's Greatest Challenge'

Following is the complete formal text of the address of Prime Minister at the Royal Theatre-Saturday night:

For the past week, I have been working my way westward and speaking to my fellow Canadians on the record and program of the Liberal government.

Here I might let you in on a little secret. I enjoy election campaigns. I enjoy getting around Canada. I enjoy getting out of Ottawa and seeing for myself some of the fine things that Canadians have been doing in the last four years.

And I want to tell you that one of the most pleasant parts of the campaign so far was the trip by water to Vancouver Island today and the drive through the beautiful scenery along the Malahat Highway. And tomorrow I am going to Brentwood Bay to try out a fishing rod which the Western Canada Liberals presented to me at my birthday party last winter.

I can understand why so many Canadians, when they retire, move to Vancouver Island to enjoy the rich scenery and pleasant climate.

'... Not Retire'

The reason for my coming here, however, is to let you know that I will just as soon NOT retire!

This week I have been speaking of happenings and achievements within Canada. Tonight, I want you to take a look with me at what's going on outside our borders.

It seems to me that Victoria is a very suitable place to speak of the international scene because of your historic ties with Britain, and your position on the Pacific Ocean, which leads to the wisdom and wonders of the turbulent East.

Here, as throughout Canada, there is deep concern for the maintenance of peace in this world—too often torn by wide divisions and disagreements.

In a world at peace, Canada's future has a smiling face—but, in a world at war, not only Canada but civilization itself could lose its way to the future.

Canada's external policy, in a few words, is to work for peace; to work in a friendly fashion, with every other nation that is willing to try, with us, to root out the causes of war and solve differences between nations by peaceful means.

Now, there are limits to what any single nation can do for peace.

That is why Canada is closely allied with like-minded nations to maintain the military strength of the free world. For we believe that in unity there is strength, and that only through our united military strength can those countries which are opposed to our way of life be convinced of our determination to preserve it.

Tension Eased

In Europe we have witnessed a relaxation of tension in the last four years. The collective strength of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, backed up by the Strategic Air Command of the United States, has brought Soviet expansion to a halt.

In the Far East, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and United States undertakings with individual countries of that area have also helped maintain the uneasy but nevertheless welcome peace.

The Middle East situation is still unstable and uncertain. But the united stand of the Baghdad Pact members, including the United Kingdom, is improving the prospects of peace, and we are hopeful that the Eisenhower Doctrine will increase stability there as well.

In short, Communist expansion has pretty well ground to a halt. And in this "stand easy" situation the free world has a chance to take stock of its position and improve it.

Certain basic factors of Canadian nationhood influence what Canada does in world affairs. Our location on this North American continent; our historic relations with Great Britain and the Commonwealth; our strong ties of race, culture and religion with Europe; and, more recently, our rapid economic growth—all have an important bearing on our position in world affairs.

Ours is a rather complex society here in Canada. For us to live and work together in harmony we must respect our ethnic and religious differences and avoid narrow regional interests. We must form habits of co-operation, mutual understanding and moderation.

Live Together

This we have done to a very encouraging degree. And this approach to getting along together within Canada is just as valuable in relations between nations. That may be one reason why Canada has made and is making such useful contributions to co-operation between the nations, for all nations must find ways to live together in friendship and harmony.

Proud as we are of Canada, I think Canadians sometimes forget that we are a nation with a small population in a very populous world. There are, in fact, 150 or so world citizens for each one of us.

It would be a bit presumptuous of us to try to take the lead in matters affecting all nations. But at times we can bring good sense and goodwill to bear to help solve problems with which nations are struggling.

And there have been occasions in recent years when Canada was able, through her initiative and imagination, to help find solutions to world problems.

One such occasion arose last year. It was a tragic moment for the free world when our British and American friends divided last fall on the question of the Suez Canal. For if there is one thing certain about world affairs and the future, it is that Great Britain must go along arm in arm with the United States.

The nations of the Commonwealth were divided among themselves over the Suez issue. The Asiatic members felt strongly about the action of the United Kingdom and France in intervening in Egypt.

This was a sad time for us in Canada, for so many of us have blood and cultural ties with both Britain and France.

There was a widening gulf of misunderstanding between the Mother of Parliaments and the other parliaments that had received their inspiration and, in fact, their very being from Westminster.

My colleagues and I feared that fighting in the Middle East would spread if something were not done and done quickly.

We made suggestions in the United Nations with the dual aim of stopping hostilities in the Middle East and restoring Commonwealth and Anglo-American solidarity.

Fearful Spread

My colleague, Canada's Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr. Pearson, took personal charge of the delicate negotiations in those critical hours; his efforts and real achievements won for him the praise and gratitude of the free world, including the British and French peoples.

Our first thought was to press for the setting up of the United Nations Emergency Force. A Canadian soldier, Major-General Burns, was then chosen by the United Nations to command this force, and Canada, to make the force effective, offered to send ships, planes and men.

This idea of a world police force is not new. Canada had several times discussed the possibility of setting up such a force under the United Nations, to be available when crises such as this arose.

And Canada had already contributed to supervisory commissions or international forces to serve the cause of peace in Korea, Kashmir and Indo-China.

Today, fighting has ceased in the Middle East, and though peace is still precarious, it does provide an opportunity to try to work out more permanent solutions to the difficult problems that exploded in open warfare.

The United Nations Emergency Force is a very positive achievement for the United Nations. It shows what the UN can do when it really gets the support we feel it should get.

Since I spoke in Victoria, nearly four years ago, there have been far-reaching developments in the world:

1.—We have seen the Soviet Union espouse the concept of competitive co-existence—or at least pay lip service to it;

2.—We have seen people the world over uniting in their desire to develop nuclear energy for peaceful purposes;

3.—We have seen the conscience of the free world stirred to meet the challenge of aiding the economically underdeveloped countries to care more adequately for their citizens.

4.—We have seen solid, practical progress towards welding the countries of Western Europe together.

Less Bellicose

Since the death of Stalin, who has taken his well-deserved place among the tyrants of history, the Soviet Union appears to have adopted a less bellicose attitude towards the West. This change is brought about, probably, because things have not been going too well with the Soviet satellite system.

But competitive co-existence, we should realize, does not have quite the same meaning for the Soviet leaders as it does for us. For them it appears to mean that as long as it does not suit them to risk open war, they will stop their attempts to dominate the world somewhat short of actual open conflict.

The cruel suppression, by Soviet arms of the popular outbreak in East Berlin and the shameful and brutal way in which they crushed the popular uprising of the freedom-fighters in Hungary—such ruthless and inhuman acts are overwhelming proof that the Soviet Union is not prepared to allow either at home or in its satellite system, any more freedom than it can help.

But there is another reason why the Soviet leaders hesitate to pursue their expansionist dreams. Their scientists have been testing some of these terrible modern weapons of warfare. I think they, too, have now become convinced of the brutal fact, of which we are so deeply conscious, that a major war, in this thermo-nuclear age, would lead to widespread destruction on both sides, and—quite possibly—to mutual self-annihilation. I have a feeling that the Soviet leaders now realize that any armed aggression by them would inevitably result in retaliation which would cause just as much damage to themselves, as they could inflict on others.

Uncomfortable

This sort of co-existence is pretty uncomfortable but it has led to some reduction in international tensions.

During the last four years, Austria and Western Germany have regained their independence. An armistice has been concluded in Korea, and the great task of reconstruction in Southern Korea has begun. Fighting has ended in Indo-China, and Canadians are serving on the supervisory commissions in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia in an attempt to help prevent it from starting up again.

Difficult as this task is for our servicemen and our External Affairs officers, it is in keeping with our view that Canada must accept her responsibility in world affairs.

The shift in emphasis of Soviet policy in no way reduces the need to maintain a strong collective defence. The goal of Communism is still world domination.

The western nations must not allow themselves, because of their deep desire for peace and their eagerness to turn their full attention to domestic matters, to be lulled into a false sense of security. This could lead to a decrease in military preparedness and a lessening of the cohesion and unity of the free world.

We must maintain our defences through the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Canada's important part in maintaining the military strength of the free world has been for the past three years in the very capable hands of a distinguished British Columbian, the Hon. Ralph Campney.

I have known Mr. Campney for quite a few years and his record of service to Canada began long before I had the privilege of meeting him.

As a matter of fact, Ralph Campney, among his other positions in the public service, was at one time a valued aide of my predecessor, Mackenzie King.

During the Korean crisis we asked Ralph Campney to assist the Minister of Defence, the Hon. Brooke Claxton, with the gigantic task of directing Canada's greatly expanded defence program. And in 1954, when Mr. Claxton retired from the cabinet, we were pleased to have a man of Mr. Campney's ability and experience to take over the defence portfolio.

Splendid Job

I am very pleased to have this opportunity to tell his fellow British Columbians what a splendid job Ralph Campney has been doing as minister of defence, and how much we are relying on his constituents to send him back to Ottawa to carry on his important work for Canada and his fellow-citizens.

I mentioned the increased interest in the peaceful uses of atomic energy. Canada has become a leader in this field, both as a uranium producer and because of our research and development program in which we are spending $18 millions a year to adapt atomic energy to peaceful purposes.

You may recall that the United Kingdom plans to build 12 atomic energy power plants in the near future. And we in the government want to make sure that Canadians, and indeed all mankind, benefit as soon as possible from this great scientific achievement of unlocking the enormous energy imprisoned in the minute mass of the atom.

Canada was represented in the conference of atomic scientists in Geneva two years ago that led to the establishment of the International Atomic Energy Agency, designed to assist countries to acquire and use this new source of energy for peaceful purposes.

Canada has also been active

at the United Nations in studying the effects of atomic radiation and in finding some way of reducing the hazards of that radiation.

In this era of change and progress, one trend gives me very deep satisfaction. And that is the very genuine desire of those peoples who have enjoyed the benefits of economic development in their own countries to assist the peoples of Asia and Africa to raise their living standards in similar ways.

Three years ago I had an opportunity to visit some of the countries of Asia and talk to their leaders. Incidentally, I was deeply moved on many occasions during that trip to see in what high esteem a representative of Canada is held in other parts of the world.

I found during my trip a tremendous surge of national feeling in all the countries of Asia that I visited. Now a feeling of proud nationalism can be a good thing, as I believe it is generally a good thing in Canada. But in Asia it sometimes takes an anti-western form, which is a left-over from the colonial era.

We have a magnificent opportunity, a magnificent challenge, to help these Asian peoples to attain their legitimate national aspirations without letting these nationalisms decrease the unity of the free world. We must, and I emphasize the word "must," demonstrate our understanding and our friendship by assisting them to develop their resources and better their social conditions.

The Commonwealth nations took the initiative in this humanitarian work in setting up the Colombo Plan. Canada is contributing over $34 millions a year through this plan to assist India, Pakistan, Ceylon and other Asian nations to solve their huge development problems.

We have also been assisting in this important humanitarian work through the United Nations Technical Assistance Program, such as the Food and Agriculture Organization, the International Labor Organization and the World Health Organization.

Progress Made

There is another important area where progress has been made in the past four years. The nations of Western Europe have made a real effort to rise above the narrow nationalism which has led to so much strife and suffering in the past, and to work together to find solutions to their economic, social and political problems.

In all these matters, Great Britain has played an important role.

Canada has welcomed, and where possible we have supported, these developments.

In advancing the cause of peace and human well-being, Canada has participated actively in the work of the Commonwealth, the United Nations and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The Commonwealth is a unique association in human history. It is based not so much on legal documents and contracts as on common ideals, common heritage and common traditions.

Mutual Respect

The effectiveness of the Commonwealth is the result of willing co-operation on the part of all members, candid and continuous exchanges of views in a friendly atmosphere of self-confidence and mutual respect, and full recognition of the aspirations of all member nations.

Above all, perhaps, is the common conviction that this association has a great capacity for good, not only for member nations, but for the entire free world.

In recent years, the Commonwealth has played an extremely valuable role in interpreting the views and policies of the Asian members to the West and of the West to the Asian members. The Commonwealth has done much to strengthen co-operation between these two areas of the world.

The Commonwealth has been effective and durable—and I sincerely trust that it will continue to be both effective and durable—because it has shown itself able to adapt to changing conditions. Its present status in the world is a great tribute to the vision and courage of Commonwealth statesmen.

Just a few weeks ago, a former British colony, the Gold Coast, became a full-fledged and sovereign member of the Commonwealth, with the name of Ghana. I have heard many fine things about the prime minister of that young country and if the people of Canada decide on June 10 that I am to remain as Prime Minister of Canada, I shall have the opportunity, in your name, of meeting and greeting him at the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference in London next month.

In a short time we shall have another Commonwealth nation—the Federation of the West Indies. Canada will have a special interest in this new nation, the closest to our shores and one with whose population we already enjoy close economic ties. I am sure that we can look forward to still closer relations with this sister member of the Commonwealth in the future.

Principal Hope

Another of the cornerstones of Canadian foreign policy is the United Nations which we still consider, despite its admitted limitations, as the principal hope for the preservation of peace in our troubled world.

In recent months doubts have been expressed in some quarters about the effectiveness of the United Nations in finding solutions to international differences. When we hear such doubts expressed we would do well to ask ourselves—what if there were no United Nations today?

If the United Nations did not exist, we probably would lapse into a state of international anarchy in a divided world with the forces of freedom on one side, the forces of reactionary Communism on the other and uncounted millions of Asians and Africans trying to remain aloof or forming their own alignments. This prospect is too grim for any freedom-loving person to think about with any equanimity.

It is important, however, to remember that the United Nations is not a government or a super-state. It can only recommend and not order a nation to comply with its wishes.

The reason why the United Nations did not save Hungary from the brutal repression of Soviet forces last year was that it could not, and not that it would not. The fault lies not with the United Nations but with Communist imperialism, which insolently disregarded the moral opinion of the world.

If there had been armed intervention through the United Nations, the first victims would have been the Hungarians themselves and the rest of the world, more than likely, would have followed the combatants into the abyss of world war.

There are three reasons why the United Nations did accomplish its immediate purpose in the Middle East and thus bring about a cessation of fighting and withdrawal of opposing forces there. It was, I suggest, because the United Kingdom and France are great responsible nations, schooled in the democratic traditions and thus heedful of majority opinions. It was because Israel is aware of the facts of life, which for her means that she must some day reach a mutually acceptable accommodation.

tion with her Arab neighbors if she is ever to know peace. It was because Egyptian leaders are realistic enough to appreciate that the only practical alternative—complete identification and collaboration with Moscow—carries with it too great risks for her national freedom and independence.

Constructive

Because Canadians have no axes to grind, because our own past helps to give us an insight into the feeling of emergent nationalisms, and because our record in international affairs is one of co-operation and sincerity in dealing with our neighbors, Canada is, more and more being looked upon by nations old and young as one with a constructive role to play in the development of peace and progress in the world.

Our own life within Canada has, in large measure, prepared us for this task, and it is a challenge that our own self-preservation makes us accept.

Without harboring any illusions about the role we can play in working for international peace and security, we must determine to do our full part to secure those ends. But we can only do so if we maintain our present reputation for integrity and sincerity, we can only do so if we, ourselves, are united in our determination to play our part as citizens of an adult and responsible nation.

That is perhaps the greatest challenge facing Canada and Canadians today.

In the field of foreign policy, as in other fields, the present government has done its best. And in what they have been able to achieve, under this government's direction, for world peace and world brotherhood, Canadians, I think, can feel a legitimate pride.
